Why So Many Suicides?

The reason for so many suicides is a problem that should give at least some concern to the people. When almost every daily paper in the State carries the account of the awful tragedy of one or more persons, generally several.

No one seems to know the cause for so many such tragedies. If it is for the want of courage to face the responsibilities of life, then we need to take the matter of teaching people their responsibility more seriously to heart.

Every child today seems to get the idea that if it can't get what it wants, life is not worth living. This may be the reason so many people are killing themselves, because they find disappointments.

If we can learn to be content, even if we fail to make the business, professional, or political grade or fall short of the social realm of which we so often dream, we would doubtless have fewer suicides.

It seems that we lose sight of the main points in our life, staking all on what we hope to get, and thinking but little of what we can and should give. It may be that the child of today is not being taught, "Thou shalt not kill," and that it means self as well as others.

We fail to measure up to the obligations we owe as men and women when we destroy our own bodies.

Justice Against the Dollar

Justice and money are having a hard fight in the Fall. Sinclair case, while the world is waiting with interest to see who will be the victor.

It is a lesson to all, which teaches how hard it is to cover a mean deed. First, a rich man bribed an official and procured valuable property belonging to the people. Later on, Jess Smith was killed, and the looters began to rest easy until Senator Walsh started his investigation and somebody began to talk a little. Then the smoke began to rise here and there, until the fire broke out on Doheny, Sinclair, and Fall.

The courts have, so far, stood with justice. But when the last lap was being made and criminal action was being pressed to deprive Sinclair and Fall of their liberties, then Mr. Sinclair began to put his money to work. He went straight to the jury and tried to buy it, according to reports given out by Government agents.

No one can tell whether their plans will work in the second trial or not. There is one thing sure: They will try every available point, from judge down through counsel, jury and witnesses. This makes it hard to get justice, since there are so many people who think more of cash than they do of honor. It is hard to get as many as twelve men without striking at least one who will sell out for the right price.

Spending Money Uselessly

Why does Gardner's Creek and Devils Gut need improvement, with not a single landing on either, nor a road going to either, except where Highway No. 90 crosses the creek? If there is any need to straighten and deepen Gardner's Creek for purposes of navigation we have never heard of it.

It would seem foolish to attempt to divert boat traffic from Roanoke River through the gut, and to make it equal to the river as a navigable stream will cost many hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The location of Devils Gut offers no advantage over the river. It might, however, serve as a convenience for a few logging firms.

What this section needs in the way of waterway improvement is the deepening of the mouth of Roanoke River, where hundreds of thousands of people will be benefited. But why spend money on waters that can in no way help the people?

IN MEMORY

Dearest mammie, thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel;
But it's God that has bereft us;
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
When in heaven in joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Forgetful in thy grave as I;
That no more will join our number,
Thou no more our sorrows know.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

On the border land we left her,
Soon to meet and part no more.
When we leave this world of care
We shall find our missing loved one
In our Father's mission fair.

We miss thee from our home, dear mammie;
We miss thee from thy place;
We miss the sunshine of thy face,
We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and sweetest care.
Our home is dark without thee,
We miss you everywhere.
Loving granddaughter,
CARRIE DELL WARD.
