The Hoover Trip to South America

The Hoover visit to Central and South America should prove of great value to this country. For many years our dominating power has apparently caused them to suspect, or perhaps envy, us; and for that, or some other cause, they have done most of their trading with the countries of Europe, from which they are descendants.

During the late war, however, we succeeded in getting a foothold in all of the nations of the South American continent. Europe, however, is again in those markets in strong competition with the United States. Therefore, the good will and friendly relations which Mr. Hoover is attempting to establish and promote will be of far-reaching influence for good.

Jealousy and hatred among nations is just as harmful as it is in the case of next-door neighbors. One of the greatest needs of the nations of the world today is relations of friendliness and good-will one toward another, and the ridding of the mind of suspicion, selfishness, and jealousy. If Mr. Hoover succeeds in this task, he will do much for his people.

Everybody Buying Automobiles

The cotton crop of North Carolina will not pay two-thirds of the running expenses of the automobiles in the State, which does not take into consideration the depreciation in car values, nor the interest, or the money invested in them, which if added to the actual running expenses would make a sum so large that it would take the entire cotton crop, all the tobacco crop, and half of the corn out of the barns to pay it.

With this great cost upon us, how are we to escape the cry of hard times? This answers the questions of which there is no demand for land and why there is so little chance to sell land. Of course, it is because the people are investing in automobiles first.

The sad feature about the automobile investment is that it does not create wealth but destroys it. All of our automobile expenditures are absorbed in pleasures, which pass away like the morning dews, with nothing to show for it tomorrow.

We are not criticizing or offering a solution, but simply wondering what the future will bring.

Where Church Members Fall Down

The Raeligh preacher struck the right chord in his sermon Sunday when he said one of the church troubles today is that there are too many half-hearted and hard-hearted Christians. He went a little further and found that there are many faint hearted and proud hearted. If all persons who are enrolled as Christians were to put their whole heart in their profession, we would get a new vision of what a Christian country really is.

So long as a fellow will sidetrack his religion for every fad and sin of the world, the church will never influence the unsaved world as it should. Every life that claims Christ as its guide must follow and stand by the things He taught.

Our business, our society, our politics, should all be guided by our religious principles.

The church member has more responsibilities than the non-church member. And if all the church members would live up to their obligations and privileges, the appeal would be so great that only a few would be found out of the church.

A Garnishee Law

An effort is now on foot to have the next legislature pass a garnishee law or submit the proposition to the voters at the next general election for their consideration.

There seems to be two sides to the question as to whether we should have such a law or not.

It would be a good law because some people are dishonest and will not meet their obligations when they can; and it may also be a bad law because some people are dishonest and want to oppress.

Our present laws have fostered dishonesty in many people, because it enables people to get a neighbor's goods and never pay for them, and there is no law to reach the man who goes to one merchant and buys groceries, promising to pay at the end of the week, and then pay nothing; only to go to some other merchant next week, and so on until he goes the round and beats them all. In cases of that kind the garnishee law is badly needed. But in many cases, where the laborer has had no employment, much sickness or other afflictions that often befall us, great harm might fall on helpless women and children.

While many States have such a law, North Carolina has always held out the hand of mercy to the poor people of the State.

Long Live the Dairy Queen

"Blind Homer sang of Trojan wars and heroes, Virgil of men and arms, Horace of love and Falterian wine, Dante of the infernal regions, Milton of Paradise, but if I had the genius of all these old masters combined, a harp with a thousand strings, and the world for an audience, I would sing with all my heart and soul of the Cow—praise her virtues and perpetuate her name to the remotest generations.

"If I were a sculptor and had the power to chisel my thoughts in marble, I would search the quarries of the earth for the purest, whitest stone, and somewhere in an enchanted land, where the skies are bluest the waters purest, and the birds sing sweetest far into the soft and mellow moonlight nights, I would begin a work of love and duty.

"I would bid the cold marble speak for me, as I pulled the chisel to its sides until the rough hard surface took the shape I wished, and at last a cow stood revealed, wide and kind-eyed in a posture of patient waiting to give the rich contents of her swelling udder, and bless the receivers with joy and health and strength.

"I would make a base upon which this spirit of my dreams would stand, and around its rim I would carve the figures of dear little babies, their hands and their expectant faces raised toward their best friend in all things animal—the friend that never fails them, the one that puts the firm, pink flesh upon their tender frames, the one that brings dimples and smiles like the touch of angel wings, when the sweet life-giving milk trickles down their tiny throats, until the bottle falls away and sleep comes to caress and hold them still in its protecting arms.

"The cow is an uncrowned queen without a scepter, and her kingdom is all the land between the seas."

—M. R. Patterson, former Governor of Tennessee.
