"Better English Week"

Better English is one of the desirable things in both the social and business life. Unfortunately, the American people have shown themselves very careless in English. It has had little attention in our schools; and, of course, less in our homes.

It is gratifying to see the leaders of our educational system sponsoring the Better English movement. They have set apart this week as "Better English Week" in this territory, hoping to make people think as they speak and write, in order to use the best sounding and best meaning words to express their thoughts.

Since language is nothing more than the means of conveying the thoughts of one person to another, it is very important that we study the fundamentals of the language we use. Parents and children at home are also members of the Better English Week Society, as well as those at school, and should use the best of care in to choose the best English they know, because the careless use of English—frequently when we know better—is responsible for so many improper expressions.

Mr. Hoover's Opportunity

Many millions of opinions are held by the American people. Lots of them think prosperity will brighten the continent immediately after Herbert Hoover takes the oath of office Monday, while there are others who fear that the sun will grow dark and poverty veil the earth in a few minutes after he takes the oath.

It is to be hoped that neither of these opinions will prevail. The real thing to be desired is fair play for everybody.

No president has had a greater opportunity to do real service to our Nation than Mr. Hoover will have, and the question is how will Mr. Hoover measure up to the occasion. His path will be more difficult than most presidents have had to travel. The people and the property are further apart than ever before. Gigantic wealth has grown to the point that it seems to think the only need for the mass of people is to work for them when they need them.

When we consider the fact that fewer folks are working for themselves each year, Mr. Hoover's greatest opportunity is not in establishing equal rights among nations. The establishment of equal rights and preserving the opportunities for the future is the biggest thing that he will have to grapple with. It is apparent that fewer people are now managing and directing the business of the country than 50 years ago. The flock of poor folks is rapidly growing larger, while the few are becoming gorgeously rich.

"Don't Blame Wall Street"

The Manufacturer and Industrial News Bureau says "Don't Blame Wall Street," and then gives some pretty good advice. It says:

An editorial in a recent issue of Collier's Weekly comments on the continuance of our unprecedented national prosperity, and shows that it is well grounded and should be permanent. High wages, more efficient business, steady employment, and improving farm conditions are most promising auguries for the future.

"In consequence of this great national development," Collier's continues, "prices of securities have been enormously enhanced."

"Much of this rise has been of the soundest character."

"Stocks have reflected the increased earnings of corporations and millions of people have been enriched."

"All this is solid and desirable. But accompanying this actual prosperity based on increased production and consumption is the artificial prosperity builded upon gambling in stocks."

"Wall Street is not to blame for this. Men and women from every walk of life and from every State in the Union have caught the fever. Stock gambling has become a great national pastime."

"Gambling threatens to stop the goose from laying her golden eggs."

"The road to safety is plain enough. Buy stocks as you would buy a house or an automobile or a suit of clothes. Measure the price by the value you are offered."

"The ownership of stocks by millions of investors is one of the soundest developments of recent years. The entire country has been benefited by the general distribution of the ownership of securities."

"But nobody in the long run is benefited by paying more than an article is worth."

"If you want to see prosperity continue, help to make it safe. Work, save, spend, invest, but don't gamble. Buy stocks when you can at rational prices, but don't go 'whoopie' around the stock ticker."

ICE

Helps Start the New Year Right

Here comes Happy New Year bringing new opportunity to all to enjoy it more fully. Whether you welcome the New Year with a dinner dance, a midnight lunch, or a New Year's breakfast, you need ice, plenty of ice, as "the life of the party." Ice chinks merrily in time with the music. Ice sparkles brightly, flashing back the light, the jewels and the gay colors of party frocks. Ice makes beverages more refreshing, foods more appetizing, tables more inviting. Serve cocktails in ice-encircled glasses—oysters and olives in sparkling beds of ice—cold delicacies, salads, butter, surrounded by cascades of shaved ice. Keep meats and all perishable foods fresh and safe with ice.

Use ice wherever needed to add the last touch of flavor and appetizing appeal. Makes the Popular Hostess More Popular. The magic of ice makes the modern woman independent of seasons in planning delightful parties and delicious meals. Right in mid-winter, the choicest fresh foods are always at her command. Fruits and delicacies from the far corners of the earth! Crisp green things, rich in the vitamins so essential to health, in all their dewy freshness! Ice refrigeration has protected their purity and goodness at every stage until they reach her kitchen, and her own ice box keeps them fresh, savory and delicious until the very minute they are used. Is it any wonder that millions of women take ice every day in the year?

Makes Foods More Healthful. Start the New Year right, with a plentiful supply of ice—then through the whole year see that your ice box is kept well filled with this efficient, inexpensive refrigerant. Ice, in a good ice box, is the cheapest and best health insurance. It constantly purifies the air in the ice box. Never trust perishable foods to unsanitary window boxes; never leave them exposed to room temperatures on pantry shelves or to the damp, vitiated air of basements. Keep them in the ice box, in ice-freshened air! A generous supply of ice every day in the year will prove a long step towards a year of assured health for yourself and your family. May yours be a New Year of Health and Happiness!
