

FEBRUARY, 1931 PERFECT MONTH

Second Month This Year Begins Sunday and Ends Saturday

The year 1931 brings an opportunity to the advocates of the adoption of a fixed and uniform calendar to show the world a rare phenomenon, namely, a perfect month in the present calendar.

The phenomenon is February, which in 1931 begins on Sunday and ends on Saturday. Such a month is the ideal sought for every month in the calendar—a 28-day month containing exactly 4 weeks, beginning with the first day of the first week and ending with the last day of the last week. Not, however, on the 1931 calendar, a perfect month in the present calendar.

The proposed 13-month fixed calendar would make every month that way by shortening the other months to exactly 4 weeks each and combining the surplus days (except on 1) into a new month of 4 weeks. Each of the 13 months would be made always to begin on Sunday by starting the year on Sunday and ending it with "Year Day," the one day in each year in excess of 52 weeks and which is not absorbed by the extra month. The added day in leap years is likewise given the new name of "Leap Day." This calendar would become fixed as well as uniform.

The years which have a "perfect February" in the present shifting calendar run in a curious cycle. They come in years which begin on Thursday, although not in every year which begins on Thursday because some years beginning on Thursday have leap years when February has 29 days, or one day in excess of 4 weeks.

The cycle of "perfect February" years began in this century with 1903, and runs from that year as follows: 11-11-6, 11-11-6, 11, until 1998, then 12 years across the non-leap year 2000 until 2010, after which the cycle of 11-11-6 is resumed.

The beauty of the proposed 13 equal months fixed calendar is that it would end confusion caused by the incessant change in the make-up of all the present months. The days of the week would no longer fall on different dates of different months because the months would all be the same and the cycling of the week-days to different dates of corresponding months from year to year would cease.

Silver Tea Well Attended at Woman's Club Monday

The silver tea given by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church on yesterday afternoon was well attended despite the March-like weather. The Club room was attractive with soft lights, potted plants, evergreens and other flowers. Mrs. W. B. Watts rendered a pleasing programme on the piano and was accompanied by Rev. Steven B. Gardner, of Washington, who sang a number of selections by request. Mrs. William Chase and Misses Eugenia Hoyt and Lucile Hassell served a salad course, and Mrs. J. G. Station poured tea for the guests. The members of the Auxiliary are highly appreciative of the splendid co-operation given them by the women of the town.—Reported.
