Need for Better Traffic Laws

There were 32,500 people killed and one million injured by automobiles in the United States last year. We have no way of knowing how many will be killed or injured this year. But when one out of every 100 people who rides is either killed or crippled each year, it gives one the right to look for and expect better and safer methods of handling automobiles. Many are preaching safety methods, and yet the same safety advocates are careless. In the possible passage of certain safety laws in the present legislature, there is some hope for a reduction in the number of accidents in our State. But the people must support the law if it is to be effective. Even if our present laws were rigidly enforced, many deaths and accidents now occurring daily would be averted.

The American Mind a Shifting Thing

The American mind is a shifting thing. When people feel gay, they go to the lanes and into the yards and cut down all the sad cedars. But when hard times begin to creep upon them again, they go out and fill the fence jams and line the roads and streets with young cedars again. If we Americans were not so shiftily-minded our living costs would not be as great as they are.

Our houses go out of style within a single generation; our trees and shrubs go out of style before they are half grown. Our hats go out of style before the season is half over. And so it is with almost every thing we have. We certainly change, and too often we suffer loss rather than gain by the change. Trucks, loaded with mountain bushes and bramble, are passing every day through the towns unloading shrubby not adapted to this altitude or soil. The owners peddle their goods just because we are crying for something new. The final result is that we make too little progress; we climb a mile and fall a mile, reaching no where.

The best designed yards and gardens in this State today are nearly all more than twenty-five years old, and many are more than fifty years old, apparently proving that we are no wiser than those of other days in spite of all our landscape specialists and artists. The difference may be that they worked from practical lines while we are being led on by magazine minds.

The tree and shrub salesman can certainly change the minds of people easily, inducing them to destroy the things they have and buy something no better.

Woe Unto the Legislators!

Legislators, woe be unto you if you force the little man to pay the taxes in the future as he has been forced to do in the past. Brush the big lobby aside and do the right thing and then adjourn. Just as long as Raleigh is crowded with high-paid and high-powered lobbyists and you listen to them, the public, or the rank and file of men will suffer.

Remember the folks who support the lobby against taxes are doing so not because they aren't able to pay the tax, but because they just don't want to pay. They are making big money; if they do not make it, then they will not have to pay.

Remember your poor friends, the ones who do not make money. Can you turn against them and see their farms and homes sold for taxes?

If a man fails to make a net income, he pays nothing, consequently he is not hurt. If he makes a fair income, let him pay.

Not Satisfied With Road Bill Alone

With no strong lobby to combat, the North Carolina Legislature last Tuesday night enacted into law the Connor Road Bill, effective April 1, 1931. If the strong lobbies were kicked out of Raleigh, other worthwhile legislation could be enacted. In the passage of the road bill there is effected a considerable saving to property, but even though great this saving might be, the people of the State continue to look for relief as provided or called for in the school bill.

Governor's Task To Find Honest Man

It is now up to Governor Gardner to find a man who is honest enough and wise enough to keep bank officers from gambling and stealing. He might have a friend who will be able to do that very thing, but in case he has not, it will be his duty to find somebody who can come as near as possible to that mark of perfection.

Cleaning Up New York

They are now talking of cleaning up New York. What a task they have, one that will require all the water in the Hudson River to wash Tammany alone. And then to think that North Carolina is trying to ape the crime breeders by legalizing gambling within its borders.

4-H CLUB WORK HELPS SECURE LARGER YIELDS

26,638 Boys and Girls Are Enrolled in Clubs in North Carolina

The 26,638 rural boys and girls enrolled in the 4-H clubs organized and conducted by extension workers of State College, played a commendable share in improving acre yield of good and feed crops and in handling livestock for better profits last year.

L. R. Harrill, state club leader, says for example, that there were 1,461 club members with corn projects. Of this number 1,001 members completed their work and made reports. These boys and girls grew 1203 acres of corn producing 49,467 bushels or an average yield of 49.4 bushels an acre and compared to the 20.9 average acre yield for the State as a whole.

The average yield of wheat grown by 29 club members was 16.8 bushels compared with a State average of 12.5 bushels an acre. The average yield per acre of Irish potatoes grown by 127 members reporting was 141 bushels as compared with the state average of 98. The average acre yield of sweet potatoes grown by 79 club members reporting was 159 bushels an acre as compared with the state average of 97 bushels. With cotton, 322 club members produced an average yield of 675 pounds of lint an acre as compared with an average for the state last year of 233 pounds.

Mr. Harrill is especially pleased with the increased interest in the livestock clubs. He says 1040 club members enrolled in dairy calf work last year with 802 members completing their projects. These boys and girls had 802 animals. There were also 1200 club members enrolled in the pig project and 806 reported though it was impossible to get a complete record of all pigs handled. However, 27 club members reported on their sheep projects showing 130 animals handled. With poultry, 1,276 members out of 2,228 members enrolled, reported on their projects showing 43,783 birds handled.

Wherein Schools Fall Short

To the Editor:

The honor system in our schools is having such a disastrous result that all over our country there are persons who are trying to call attention to it in the hope of getting a change.

On October 31, at White Plains, New York, the Westchester County grand jury handed up a presentment to Supreme Court Justice Graham Witschief, in which they held the educational system of the United States to be responsible for the prevalence of crime in this country.

Says the presentment: "Crime is rapidly increasing in this country, especially among the young and already has reached a stage which marks us as the most criminal of all civilized nations. This increase of crime can not be attributed to new world conditions, because Canada is a notably a law abiding country, nor to poverty, because Great Britain and many other European nations have much more poverty than the United States and much less crime."

"These sister nations are distinguished by a well balanced system of education which apparently is their chief bulwark of crime prevention."

"Our schools excel in training for science, invention, industry and commerce, but pay little attention on how to live or how to govern and more especially they afford only weak and inadequate instruction in philosophy of living or in morality; so that the pupils are not made conscious of their relation to society, the rights of others, respect for law and order or respect for the proper constituted authorities."

FRUIT PRICES ARE LOWER

Representative of Produce Company Here Recently Gives Reasons

Prices paid for fruit in this section have been lower during the past few months than in years, according to a statement made by a representative of a fruit produce company recently. The representative, traveling through here this week, stated that the low prices are the result of the unusually large crops produced in both Florida and California.

The public, generally, attributed the low prices for fruits to the existing depression, but the representative stated that the large crop was responsible for the low price level. The crop was said to be so large that the cooperative marketing associations in Florida and California were unable to handle the crops and keep prices up. A price increase is expected for the next crop if the growers limit production.

On March 10, the federal government had approved 1,950 loans amounting to $318,313 for North Carolina farmers in the drought relief areas.
