COMMUNITY FAIR AT PARMELE IS GREAT SUCCESS

Miss Lora E. Sleeper and G. H. Cox Principal Speakers

Parmele.—A "live-at-home" community fair was sponsored by the Woman's Home Demonstration Club of Parmele Tuesday night, November 24th.

A splendid program was given by the school, centered around living at home. Essays were given by a few of the seventh grade children. Mrs. Georgianna Woodburn generously donated prizes for the two best essays.

Miss Sleeper, the home demonstration agent, and Mr. G. H. Cox, of Robersonville, gave excellent talks on living at home.

After the program the audience was invited to inspect the exhibits of fruits and vegetables, most of which were canned. Dresses, new and remodeled, and lots of fancy work were exhibited.

A miniature farm home and the out-buildings with exhibits centered around them was made to represent the "live-at-home" program. Prizes were given for the best all-round exhibits. First prize went to Mrs. Susie Bryant, and second to Mrs. Lucy Williams.

The voting contest for the prettiest girl was won by Miss Pauline Langley. The prize, which was an angel food cake, brought over $10. The proceeds were used to buy school books for a few children and to help carry on the hot lunch program put on twice a week for the benefit of the school children.

From the interest shown by the club members and people of the community, it is felt that this program will greatly benefit the community and that an even greater fair will be held next year.

SAYS FARMERS MAKE PROGRESS

By GUY A. CARDWELL
 Agricultural and Industrial Agent, Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co.

The world is in an awful muddle; but we are confident that this nation and especially the great agricultural southeast will soon throw off its bewilderment and straighten out for its onward, upward journey of progress.

We have traveled rather extensively throughout Virginia and the Carolinas during the summer season, and have noted material progress being made by farmers in the way of diversified and specialized agriculture.

Farmers, many of them, are in distress, because of indebtedness incurred in the past and further because of depressed prices at which they are now obliged to sell their produce; but successful farmers—successful farm operations—are to be found in every neighborhood. These successes are an example and an inspiration and they are being used as such by wise county farm agents and home demonstration agents in their personally conducted farm tours.

We have often heard the expression, "seeing is believing," and this is working out according to schedule on the farm tours that are becoming an established feature of agricultural educational work.

It is all right to take farmer-groups to experiment stations—much valuable information is to be gained in this way—but to make a real impression take them to see and study Tom Jones' success with tobacco and Bill Smith's ton litter of hogs at six months of age.
