markets by limiting consumption, and no change can be expected until all people go back to work." Mr. Ferguson said.

Stating that he was a firm believer of cooperation in every undertaking, the agent said he was not interested now in cooperative buying and selling particularly at this time, but that he was vitally interested in production. Consider your own farm as an individual problem, he urged. If you lost money raising tobacco last year, change your tactics this year and plant more land to lespedeza, oats, and wheat and gardens. Martin County people bought 53,000 bushels of wheat last year, and the oat crop was 75,000 bushels less than it should have been. Two million gallons of milk should be consumed over and above the amount produced at the present time. "You are not treating your children right," he charged the people. When you have met these requirements, then consider your strictly cash crops, he concluded.

The tobacco outlook is dark; in fact, there is no outlook for it, but farmers are warned to look out for the results of a big acreage, Representative Green of the Federal Farm Board said in his talk before the assembly. Under present conditions, we can not grow tobacco successfully, the representative said, suggesting three things in producing the crop this year. Better quality is necessary, along with improved marketing conditions, and acreage must be reduced, Mr. Green said. When all the reduction is made, it will hardly be more than 15 per cent this year, and consumption is expected to drop more than that, it was explained.

Other than living at home and practicing economy, there is little the Martin County farmer can do in 1932.

Mr. D. D. Stalls, who has been dangerously ill with pneumonia, is recovering at his home on Main Street here.

TOBACCO SALES OFF FROM 1930

Pounds and Price Both Are Considerably Under Last Year

Raleigh.—Tobacco producers' sales in North Carolina up to January 1, 1932, amounted to 422,631,212 pounds, according to figures released today by the State-Federal Crop Reporting Service. The total sales on the same date a year ago amounted to 490,595,793 pounds. The average price for all sales this season was $9.17 per 100 pounds, as compared with an average price of $13.41 per hundred last season, or $4.25 per hundred less than was paid for the 1930 crop.

Indications are that the U. S. Government crop estimates of 468,520,000 pounds for the North Carolina 1931 crop will be equalled if not exceeded, reports say, since two months yet remain in the sales season, and since some 25,000,000 pounds of tobacco grown in North Carolina is sold in border markets each year, either in South Carolina or Virginia. A considerable amount of very poor tobacco was offered for sale in many markets, in some instances so poor that it was refused for sale, the report states, which is one of the reasons for the low average price so far this year.

During the month of December, 68,058,914 pounds were marketed in North Carolina markets at an average of 6.7 cents per pound, as compared with sales of 73,449,151 pounds in December, 1930, at an average of 12.54 cents per pound.
