DO YOU REALIZE THAT SPRING IS JUST AROUND THE CORNER?

Of course, we are all spending money very cautiously. Necessity and common sense tell us that this is the proper thing to do. If you would realize, however, that to neglect necessary repairs is very costly, and being able to buy materials at the lowest price in years with ample labor at greatly reduced prices—now is an ideal time to attend to these small things.

How about a new sleeping porch? A new coat of paint? A new garage? It might be that you need a new CERTAINTED Roof or a new bathroom. Do your floors need repainting or to be repaired? Let us figure on your requirements.

SAYS MOST FAIR TAXES ARE THOSE PUT ON INCOMES

Says Tax Laws Should Be Revised and Made More Flexible

(Note: This is the first of a series of stories that will deal with the views and competency of candidates for offices that concern readers of The Enterprise.)

Tax laws should be so revised and written with sufficient flexibility so that the supply of revenue for the government of North Carolina will respond to the gradual economic changes, according to a statement made by Richard T. Fountain, of Rocky Mount, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of North Carolina, to a representative of The Enterprise, in an interview this week.

"The fairest tax, in my mind, is the income tax, for the reason that this would collect tax from persons, firms, and corporations, who are sufficiently fortunate to earn some substantial income above the proper and necessary exemption. A constitutional amendment limits income tax to six per cent. It may be necessary to submit this to the people again for a higher rate."

"I believe it is the duty of the State to support the burden of the six months' school term, and on account of the great shift of wealth from real estate to other classes of property, I believe it should be supported from sources other than an ad valorem tax upon real estate and other tangible property.

"I do not favor any kind of sales tax, but if one is necessary, I prefer the so-called luxury tax in the place of the gross sales tax bill. I believe and know that there are other sources of revenue in the state from which schools and other government expense can be supplied without an ad valorem tax."

"Land should be revalued now, as it has been in the past, and I favored this in the last legislature. Also public school teachers should receive fair remuneration commensurate with the importance and character of the service performed, having regard for their equipment and professional training. And it is important now that schools give more attention to vocational education.

"If I correctly interpret the sentiment of North Carolinians, they will never be willing to give up their local government where they are being served by local men and women elected at the ballot box and substitute therefor state government in local affairs served by appointive officers unknown to them. This is the goal of those in favor of the 'short ballot,' and efforts should be made to prohibit this."

"I do not believe that there can be any true revival in business until there is a change in the Washington administration so that tariff barriers can be removed, opening channels of trade to take the surplus of produce in one section to the needy and hungry in other parts. Labor can not be prosperous unless the employer is prosperous."

"Cost of government can and should be reduced without lowering its efficiency. Officers and departments with duties which can be performed by some other department with equal efficiency and with the same cost should be eliminated and abolished," concluded Mr. Fountain.

Mr. Fountain was born at Cedar Lane in the old Fountain home place in Edgecombe County in the year of 1885. He attended Edgecombe County schools, including the Tarboro Male Academy and also the University of North Carolina, from which law school he graduated in 1907. His business career began as a lawyer in Rocky Mount.

His first office was judge of the Rocky Mount municipal court. Next he represented Edgecombe County in the legislature for a number of terms, serving as speaker of the House for some time. He now holds the office of lieutenant governor, and is a member of the North Carolina Park Commission. He is a member of the Presbyterians church, Knights of Pythias,

BUILD FOR THE NEAR FUTURE RASING STOCK

Farmers who have produced excess amounts of hays, grain and other feedstuffs in the last two or three years should begin to slowly add livestock to their agricultural systems and not allow the lure of high prices for so-called cash crops in the future to change them from this course towards better balanced farming.

"In addition to balancing our present systems of farming, livestock helps to build soil fertility and permits the utilization of non-salable feed with profit to the grower," says Earl H. Hostetler, in charge of animal husbandry investigations at State College. "The eradication of the cattle tick has made it possible for us to improve the quality of our cattle over large areas but it has also left unoccupied thousands of acres of native grasses and reeds which were formerly returning some revenue. Many doubt that better bred animals would return profit on this kind of grazing. It is true that animals, like plants, must be fed and cared for if they are to thrive and return a profit yet, much of this native grazing should be utilized better than it is at present."

Mr. Hostetler says landowners in tick free territory need to know what kind of legumes and cultivated grasses will give them the best results in their respective sections. North Carolina farmers need also to learn that southern protein feeds such as cottonseed meal could be used to better advantage. Northern and western livestock growers have long been large users of these feeds but down here where the feed is grown, it is little used to grow out finished animals.

bean meal and other such feeds produced in this State could be used in fattening livestock here at home and the fertility kept on home farms. Until the North Carolina farmer learns to feed livestock, just so long will he buy meat from Chicago, work stock from Missouri, hay from Kansas and milk from Wisconsin, says Mr. Hostetler.
