Watch the Crowd

The choice of leaders has always been one of the greatest problems of man.

In all ages the same motive has worked on man to procure the support of the masses. That motive has been selfishness.

The devil tempted Adam and Eve and told them God had lied to them. They believed the devil and lost their estate. The same devil tempted Christ, and he said, "Get behind me, Satan." He later said to the world, "I am the way and the life." The same two principles are still abroad in the land.

Politicians have ever been pleading their cause too frequently for selfish purposes.

Tomorrow the people of this state will be faced with a duty, not of whom ye will serve, but with whom ye will see and hear of candidates they have never heard of before. They will not know the type of men they are, nor for what they stand. The question is coming squarely before us tomorrow. What should we do?

We should not always listen so much, but rather watch the crowd. Choose your friends, those who have stood by and been true to you. Count character and dependability. If you don't know who you are voting for, then watch those men and women whom you are most willing to trust to serve you, your wives and children, for social, educational, religious, and moral uplift, and vote with them.

The Same Old Tammany

The same Tammany that has always tried to dominate the politics of the United States is still under fire. And while it is slick enough to slip through a mighty small crack, it has not been able to convince the folks that it is not an organization of graft and deception, which includes everybody in the whole organization, including the honorable mayor and would-be political dictator, Jimmy Walker, a pretty clever fellow in a way, but more of a gang leader than an honorable servant of the people.

What the National Democratic Party ought to do is to remove Tammany from its council table. It will be stronger alone.

Fountain and the Greensboro News

Nobody has spoken or written quite so drastically of any candidate as the Greensboro News did in an editorial against Mr. Fountain Thursday. It sounded more like the last bite of a dying serpent than it did the voice of a dignified foe.

It is generally considered unfair to hit under the belt or after the adversary has turned away. Of course, the Greensboro News put this charge out so late it will be hard for Fountain to answer.

The general impression seems to be, however, that it will not need answering because Fountain has got Ehringhaus beaten so badly that nothing the administration can do will help Mr. Ehringhaus very much.

It may be that Fountain has "bet" Mr. Jeffress, the principal owner of the News and highway boss, so hot that the editorial is only a steam combustion. Perhaps Fountain's charge that Jeffress is spending the state's money and using the state's men in trying to elect Mr. Ehringhaus has burned through his thin skin and his paper is trying to get even with him.

One thing Mr. Jeffress has not done and that is he has not proved the Fountain charge untrue. And everybody knows the state's money has been used to try to elect Ehringhaus governor.

Too Much Prejudice and Falsehood

Too much prejudice and falsehoods have worked their way into the present political struggle, which has, to a great extent, created hatred against the better class and fostered the interests of the unworthy. Fortunately, we are always blessed by the leadership of a few men and women we can safely trust.

In our present campaign in this state, we have the spectacle of leading parts being taken by some of that class of men who can only thrive in the lower strata of politics—men who are not trusted by their own folks, neither in the moral or business world, who seem to find it easy to corral the forces that usually are moved by prejudices and selfish designs rather than by the higher ideals of good government and fair dealings for all the people.

We should not lose sight of the fact that first of all we should count character rather than prejudices in selecting our officials.

Two Crimes That Are Close Kin

Sampson Independent.

In the comparison of dastardly acts, that of John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk ship-builder, in perpetrating the deliberate hoax upon the Lindbergh family, ranks a close second to that of the actual kidnaping and murder of the baby. It matters not what the motive for putting over the hoax might have been, Curtis is guilty of an inexcusable act and should be made to suffer for it.

After admitting that his maneuvers in connection with the Lindbergh case were faked, Curtis attempted to place the blame, in part, at least, upon Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, his assistant in the baby negotiations. The minister has not shown the proper attitude in the matter, judging from press reports of the procedure. He, too, should be required to make clear his part in the affair. And if he is found to have been a willing party to the hoax, then he should be dealt with by whatever law he may be reached.

Not only did the part played by Curtis in the matter serve to obstruct the search for the real kidnapers and add worry and suspense to the stricken parents and the world at large, but it cost the government and Colonel Lindbergh an enormous sum in cash. It is almost as difficult to conceive of how any sane person could have perpetrated the hoax as it is to conceive of how the kidnaping and murder could have been committed. The two crimes, one or both, bear out the old saying that "there are all sorts of people in the world."

RUN-DOWN and WEAK

"I began taking Cardui when in a weakened, run-down condition," writes Mrs. F. S. Ferrit, of Wesson, Miss. "I took one bottle, and I seemed to improve so much that I sent for six bottles. After I had taken the six bottles, I seemed entirely well. "Before I took Cardui, I was nervous, restless, blue and out of heart. I felt depressed all the time. After I took Cardui, all this disappeared. "I gave my daughter Cardui and it helped to relieve irregular..." This medicine has been used by women for over 50 years.
