A Child of the Liquor Trusts

John H. Small, the former congressman from this district, and trust attorney-lobbyist, seems to be earning his money as representative of the liquor people. Although he announced his residence as Washington, D. C., something like a year ago, yet nothing can happen in North Carolina either in business or in politics but what he is down here blabbing for the whiskey trust headed by Raskob, Dupont and Co. who have designed already the establishment of a great whiskey and beer trust like unto which the world has never before seen.

Mr. Small has butted into conventions, and now he is trying to butt into the North Carolina Bar association with his whiskey-rabble.

Small is smart. While he was paid to represent the people in Congress for 20 years, apparently he represented the corporate interests instead. He has, no doubt, been a pest for many years to the people who thought he was their friend, for it is more or less evident now that he was against them rather than for them.

It would be just recompense to expel him from the State rather than to allow him to come among us as the agent of selfish grafters who are trying to head us deeper into the mire.

Striking at Two Educational Institutions

It is beginning to appear as if somebody is trying to knife our State educational institutions, and that our State College, where we have spent four and one-half millions for equipment and educate about 2,000 students annually, and our Woman's college at Greensboro, where we have a similar investment and where we educate about the same number of girls, are both about to be abandoned to the bats.

Governor Gardner recommended a consolidation of these schools with the State University, which appeared to be a very wise undertaking in order to cheapen costs and avoid duplications of courses. The plan was to combine the engineering schools at Raleigh and at Chapel Hill into one.

Governor Gardner went to Chicago and brought Mr. Works, an educational expert, back to tell him how to reorganize the system. But to the deep humility of the people of North Carolina, Mr. Works suggests making the University a very high-powered institution where the wealthy may go and engage in the theories of things, and at the same time virtually abandon State College at Raleigh and Woman's college at Greensboro, two institutions that have made their impress on the home, the agricultural, the business and the economic life of the State.

People think Governor Gardner should keep his promise to the three schools by holding them intact, rather than placing himself in the hands of a Chicago University man who has high-powered theories, but perhaps a no better line of sound, sensible reasoning of what the people of North Carolina need than they know themselves.

Our State needs more people to know how to make a living, and certainly State College and the North Carolina College for Women at Greensboro have done more along that line than any other of the institutions in our State.

If Mr. Work succeeds in destroying our colleges at Raleigh and Greensboro then let the legislature restore them.

Should Harmonize

It may be that there is a little too much being said by some newspapers about the recent primary candidates. Since all candidates, both those who won and those who lost, seem to be on good terms, it is doubtful if it is good for anybody to keep nagging and opening up more sores. It can't help those who won, and it is cowardly to kick those who have lost.

It is just and proper to exalt the strength and to exploit the weakness of candidates before they are chosen in the primary or general election, after which all the people should act together in one common cause.

Before we get good government we must harmonize the forces of truth and justice. We can't do it by pointing out the weaknesses of our friends. This habit of nagging has broken up many homes and weakened political parties.

Senator F. M. Simmons

Carl Goerch, in The Washington Progress.

Somebody, at some time or other, made the assertion that an honest confession is good for the soul.

If that is so, then I'd like to make a confession with respect to the attitude which I—together with many other North Carolinians—took with respect to former Senator F. M. Simmons in 1928.

I abused Senator Simmons through the columns of my paper; I inferred that he was a traitor to his party; I intimated that he was disloyal to the people who had stood by him for many years and whose feelings he should have considered; I hinted at a great many other things.

I wish to say that I am honestly ashamed of what I wrote and said at that time. It has taken me almost four years to obtain an accurate opinion concerning Senator Simmons and what he did during the Alfred E. Smith campaign. As I see things today, Furnifold M. Simmons is one of the greatest living men that North Carolina ever has produced. Instead of reviling him for his stand in 1928, I can now admire him for what he did. I can appreciate his viewpoint and I can understand his actions at that time. Senator Simmons was eternally and everlastingly right. Alfred E. Smith was not the man for President of the United States. He never was and never can be. Senator Simmons had the courage to express his convictions. Shrewd politician that he was, he knew without doubt that his stand would mean his political death. But he never hesitated; he never wavered. He did his duty as he saw it, and he did it fearlessly.

I admire Senator Simmons. I admire him just as heartily today as I abused him in 1928. Somehow or other—although I am not in a position to speak for any one else—I believe that there are a great many other people in North Carolina who feel exactly as I do about him.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our baby, Linda Ann, who was taken from us by death, July 14, 1930. Age, 1 year and 1 month:
 Two years ago you left us,
 Your little voice was stilled;
 You left a place within our hearts,
 That never can be filled.
 We often sit and think of you,
 When we are all alone;
 For memory is the only thing,
 That grief can call its own.
 You were so sweet and precious,
 It was hard to see you die;
 But we shall strive to meet you
 In the "Sweet Bye and Bye."
 MR. and MRS. R. A. HANSLIP.
