DAIRYING BUILDS SOIL FERTILITY

Improves Soils Instead of Robbing Them of All Valuable Matter

Dairy farming improves soils instead of depleting them. On every well handled dairy farm large quantities of legume hays, wheat bran, cottonseed meal and other such feeds are converted into milk through cows...

John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at State College, has done some careful calculating about the plant food value of these feeds. He says that on a basis of ten cents a pound for nitrogen and five cents a pound each for phosphoric acid and potash...

Not only does dairy farming help to build up the soil but the cropping system followed prevents much washing. "On account of the organic matter and countless bacteria in cow manure, it has a greater farm value than a chemical analysis would show," says Arey.

Mr. Arey does not believe any system of farming can be permanently profitable unless soil fertility is maintained. It makes no difference, he says, what the cash return may be from a crop because if the wealth is secured at the expense of the soil, the farmer will lose in the end.

COTTON CO-OPS TAKE STAND ON PENDING LAWS

Urge Support Farm Board And Goldsborough Bill; Fight Sulphate Duty

Raleigh.—Urging North Carolina senators and congressmen to exert efforts to prevent imposition of a duty on imported sulphate of ammonia, to promote the purposes of the Goldsborough Bill for increasing commodity prices to 1929 levels through control of credit and currency, and to support, protect and strengthen the Agricultural Marketing Act and the Federal Farm Board, three resolutions, adopted by members and directors of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association...

being made to induce the collector of customs to impose a certain duty which may be as high as $15 per ton, on imported sulphate of ammonia for use as fertilizer, the resolution states: "Whereas this would raise the price of this imported fertilizer material to cotton farmers and other farmers to the extent of said duty and make it impossible for many farmers to use this kind of material, decidedly the most needed kind of fertilizer, therefore be it resolved: "That we ask very earnestly that you do whatever you may be able to prevent the imposition of this duty which would increase the price of sulphate of ammonia, assuring you that by so doing you will render a very valuable service to North Carolina farmers generally." The second resolution points out that "so long as farmers are required to produce three or four bales of cotton to pay a debt which originally represented only one bale of cotton, and other things in proportion, we can have nothing but a prolonged series of foreclosures, bankruptcies, and general disaster," and resolves: "That we appreciate the action of our representatives in supporting the Goldsborough Bill and urge them that they do not stop with this vote but see that effective steps are taken to carry out the desired program." The resolution also commends Senator Josiah W. Bailey for "his able speech and vigorous action" in interest of the bill and urges him to continue his fight until real victory is achieved.

Endorsing the Agricultural Marketing Act and the Federal Farm Board as instruments performing exceedingly important services for agriculture and having possibilities of "rendering much more telling services in the future," the third resolution calls upon the State's representatives, because of "the urgent if not actually dire needs of the farming industry, to support, protect and strengthen in every reasonable way the Agricultural Marketing Act and the activities of the Federal Farm Board."
