SECURE FOOD SUPPLY FROM FALL GARDEN

Carefully Prepared Soil and Partially Shaded Seed Beds Needed

Carefully preparing the soil and using partially shaded seed beds will permit the gardener to have a supply of vegetables for the late fall garden. "In starting plants which need to be transplanted, it is better to seed them in partially shaded seed beds rather than attempt to plant in the open field," recommends E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturist at State College. "A lattice work of small slats makes an excellent covering for such a bed, but if slats are not available, pine brush or other material may be used. However, this covering should be placed high enough about the ground to permit free circulation of the air and to give room for watering and weeding. If the soil is dry when the seedling is made, water it thoroughly and then cover with old sacks to retain the moisture. Remove the sacks as soon as the seedlings begin to push through the earth."

Young plants grown this way must be hardened, however, before they are exposed to the hot summer sun. This may be done by gradually removing the shade.

In planting garden seeds directly in rows, get the seed down in the moist earth. For instance, beans and corn need to be planted in rather deep furrows, Morrow says. Cover more deeply than when spring planting is done, especially with the large seeded crops.

Small seeded crops will require considerable attention when planted in the open field. This means a carefully pulverized seed bed and possibly old sacks or boards laid over the row. When boards are used, raise them as soon as the seedling push through and place each end on a rock or brick. Harden to the sun gradually by removing the boards in the early morning and late afternoon for the first few days.

NO PROMISE OF QUICK WEALTH RAISING HOGS

However, It Is Still Most Advantageous To Sell Corn As Pork

The general level of all farm prices in the United States is too low for North Carolina farmers to expect unusual profits from hog feeding, but any person with hogs and corn should find it more advantageous to sell the corn as pork rather than as grain. "It is not wise for our farmers to make quick shifts towards large-scale hog production with the expectation of great profits from the undertaking," says J. F. Criswell, extension economist at State College. Mr. Criswell has been giving careful study to the trend and outlook for farm commodities this year and while he agrees with others that the increase in price of pork will be very beneficial to those prepared to feed hogs, he does not think there should be any decided shift to this project until more stability and continuity of price is assured.

"Consumers can use, beef, veal, lamb and mutton for pork and they may substitute vegetable oils for lard if pork goes too high in price," he says. "This means that the shortage of pork stocks in storage and the demand may fail to have its full effect. The price of $3.19 a hundred for pork in May was the lowest in the past 35 years. This soared to over $5 in July because farmers in the principal livestock belts did not believe it worth their while to get their animals in shape for the market. Many are carrying their stock over until next year and few bred their sows for pigs this spring in spite of the fact that there was plenty of feed on hand."

The shortage of pork and pigs exists also in Denmark and Germany, says Criswell. These two countries are greatest competitors of the United States for the English trade.

The corn-hog ratio is still favorable however, and those having corn and hogs will find feeding the animals the most profitable way to sell the grain.

Receiving Agents Will Announced in Few Days

Greenville.—C. C. Hilton, field representative of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association, is now busy appointing or re-appointing receiving agents for the cooperative this season.

Mr. Hilton said he soon expects to have all the receiving in his territory. Pitt, Greene, Martin, Beaufort, and Wilson counties, appointed and will then announce their names.

PARENTS URGED TO SAVE ALL OLD SCHOOL BOOKS

Will Be Useful in Providing Children Without Means To Buy Them

With money becoming increasingly scarce among all the classes of people, it is more necessary than ever that every penny be conserved this year, according to the school authorities in the county, who suggest that one way to save money this year is to save all the old school books so that children whose parents will not be able to buy new books this year may use them.

One of the largest problems which the parent-teacher organizations will have to deal with is providing books for children unable to buy them, as well as providing food and clothing for these school children. This past year was bad enough, but indications are that conditions will be just as bad, if not worse.

The state provides the school, the teachers, the fuel to heat the buildings, but not the school books and other materials. The big school buildings and the millions of dollars spent for teachers' salaries are wasted if the school children do not have the necessary textbooks. Thousands of children in the state were not able to buy their books last year and hence lost much of the value of the time spent in the school.

The people of the state who have children in school and who have been able to buy textbooks can be of great help this year if they will turn over all the old books not now needed by their children to the parent-teacher associations in the various towns, for distribution among those not able to buy their books. This will assure the children a better educational advan-

LOCAL MEN WILL LEAVE SOON FOR MART OPENINGS

Border Markets Open Next Tuesday, Georgia Two Days Later

A number of local men will leave here within the next few days for the late opening of the tobacco markets in Georgia and the border markets in North and South Carolina. Less than a month remains before the market here swings into action for the sale of bright leaf tobacco.

Among local tobacco men who will attend sales in the south are: Messrs. W. M. Scales and C. B. Carraway, who will go to Conway and other border markets. Mr. E. G. Anderson, unless he gets further instructions, will buy tobacco on the Whiteville market, where he will represent the Liggett and Myers Tobacco Co. Messrs. Buck and Jesse James will possibly go to the Georgia market, which will open two days later this year than the border markets.

Speculation is rife over prices, which are expected to be considerably higher than those of last year because of the reduced yield of tobacco.

The market here will open on Tuesday, September 6, and all preparations will be completed for the opening before that time.

Reduced 30 Pounds Never Felt Better

Take the case of Miss Madelon Crowley, for instance, who lives in Little Rock, Ark. Just read her letter:

"I have used Kruschen Salts for one year—when I started I weighed 140 pounds—now I weigh 110 pounds and never felt better in my life."

That's the big reason a host of men and women take Kruschen to lose weight—as the fat goes you gain in health—skin clears—eyes grow bright—activity replaces indolence.

Take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—cut down on fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—a jar of Kruschen that costs but a trifle last 4 weeks—get it at Clarks' Drug Store, Inc., or any drugstore in the world—but for your health's sake demand and get Kruschen Salts.
