France May Offer Peace Plan

France expects to offer a permanent peace plan, according to reports coming from high sources in that country. It is likely that Germany's demand to come back as a world power may have had some influence on France.

The French have not forgotten how hard it was to whip Germany when most of the world powers were helping France. So, not being certain which side England or the United States will be on next time, she thinks it will be best to pave the road to peace rather than make too many harsh demands on other nations.

If France proposes a plan that will give the world material disarmament in 10 years assure permanent peace, regardless of her motives for doing so, she will have contributed more to the world than any other nation has ever done.

Conservatism Pays

Despite unfavorable seasons and the difficulty in procuring tobacco plants the early part of the 1932 growing season, many farmers declare they have had the best year since 1919 in their farming operations. The secret of the whole thing is centered around their conservatism. They have lived at home on home-grown products, and by so doing they have remained fat and healthy. They have been conservative in the use of commercial fertilizers. They have not galavanted to and fro all over the country wasting money and at the expense of their crops. They have remained at home and cared for their crops. Now they are getting more than they spent, which means they are realizing a profit. And when a man gets a profit he is generally happy.

We'll hardly recover our economic equilibrium this year, but with a few more conservative ones we will come out on top with old debts, taxes and other obligations squared-off.

While we believe we are on the upgrade, there is much work ahead. Next year is the year for every family who can get on a farm to go there and make a living for themselves, and then a little money will money will be all we'll need.

We must remember that Hoover and Roosevelt both together can't do as much for us as we can do for ourselves.

France Has a Josephus Daniels

Brooklyn Eagle.

Imitation is the sincerest flattery. Josephus Daniels, down in North Carolina, may chuckle as he reads that the French minister of marine is having a dickens of a time meeting the fire protest of an order affecting all navy canteens and wiping beer, wine, and cider off the map. Lemonade is the substitute. A lemon is being handed to each Jackie in the navy of the French Republic. He retains the trifling consolation of a single pint of wine a day, served as his regular ration; he can not get more at the canteen.

When Josephus Daniels, as Secretary of the Navy, abolished the wine mess for officers, he showed even greater courage. The navy rank and file have no "pull" in Washington. The Annapolis graduates are a different proposition. They and their sisters and their aunts have to be reckoned with. Yet Daniels, metaphorically following the example of Faragut at Mobile Bay, lashed himself to the mast, and won out.

To a Yankee lemonade seaker, the British barmaid exclaimed virtuously: "The lemon is forbidden 'ere; we keeps a temperance 'ouse." Josephus was not so severe. He admitted lemonade and grape juice. His French imitator has to consider other things. A considerable part of France is busied with the raising of wine grapes, and the making of wines. All the delegates to the French Assembly from these wine areas are out on the trail of the minister of marine. He is "trying to introduce prohibition." He is trying to strangle the wine industry. He must mend his ways or face trouble.

We may imagine that in the days of John Paul Jones, when we were really doing things on the Seven Seas, the grog rations counterbalanced the discipline of flogging. Today our seamen in the navy are not flogged, but they get no grog, no wine, no beer. Whether they would fight so desperately as the men who stood with John Paul Jones is pretty hard to determine.

Progress In Russia

We will not be able to call Russia that dark backward nation any longer, since she has just completed the largest power plant in the world. More than three-quarters of a million horsepower have been added to the boundless natural resources of that country, which is out of war and progressing by leaps and bounds.

This is all being done in their try-out of Communism, which, so far, has worked out pretty well. Of course, the system may fail yet; doubtless there will come a time when the people will split in their opinions. The thrifty may get tired of carrying the sluggard. Regardless, however, of what may happen, we must confess that Russia is marching on and that her laws are nearer devised for the good of all the people than are the laws of any other nation.

The United States should take more interest in Russia, since the day is not so far distant before Russia bids fair to become one of our greatest trade rivals.

Call Off the Election

Now that the Literary Digest is fast determining the national political situation, why not call off the election scheduled for November 8, and save all that expense?

"The State Needs ..."

Goldsboro Transcript and Messenger.

Judge W. A. Devin of the Superior court has our respect in all things, but we find we differ from his announcement at Wilmington that the State needs additional district judges.

Granted, that if present court methods are continued the State will need more and more judges, solicitors, court attaches—all at the cost of the taxpayers.

But, what the State really needs, is modernization of court procedure. Give judges more power and encourage them to use it so as to get to the facts in a case more quickly, whether they are sitting alone in judgment or guiding a jury it matters not.

Clients of attorneys trying cases in court might for a few months have their sensibilities shocked—they might not feel they were getting their "money's worth" if their lawyers were not allowed to bicker without regard for time over the smallest and most inconsequential points and to argue to a jury for hours without any adherence to the truth except to those bits of it standing to their advantage.

But even clients, we imagine, would eventually welcome court procedure of more business-like method and set to a moderate speed.

How judges, now condemned to endless listening to futile talk, could not but welcome a change with joy is beyond our imagining.

More About Sectionalism

Hertford County Herald

Quite regularly we read in some of the State papers and heard of some political demagogue prating before audiences about the arraying of section against section in North Carolina. It was born of the last General Assembly which fought so long and hard over tax laws; and it was used then to prejudice minds against one side or the other of that fight. It has since been used for the same purpose, or to keep the prejudices alive until another session of the legislature meets next January to renew the same old fight.

The brunt of the accusation has been against the "Easteners" and one or two notable examples of newspaper correspondents come to mind when we write of this derogatory. We aren't blaming the newspaper folks so much for their writing, for they are but the effusions of certain political minded folks who are well known to the craft; the class that does a lot of talking in confidence and in whispers but who disclaim any connection with the thing written about when it is spread in the newspapers to be read by all the populace.

This newspaper is happy to see one of its favorite daily journals that has had much to say about the sectional prejudices of Eastern North Carolina call the hand of one of its neighbors in the Piedmont for publicity stating that the central portion of the State must organize to fight Eastern Carolina in the next General Assembly. It has been our observation that, if there is any sectionalism in the State as has been written of and spoken about so much in the past, it was not a general state of mind confined to Eastern Carolina alone but has been just one of those sores that the body politic is afflicted with, and that it is a general complaint not localized nor confined to any one spot on the body of North Carolina.

There has been and will continue to be contests in and out of the legislature; but, let us not perpetually employ that old worn-out method of begging the question by crying out aloud "sectionalism". Fight it out on merit and not on prejudice.

North Carolina, a Strange State

"North Carolina, that strange state! No group of school children could ever do stranger things than the sovereign state of North Carolina. Outsiders are invited to trade in North Carolina cities, spend money there, yet tariff walls of licenses are built to keep others out. They want trade there. They broke a tradition of nearly a century to defeat Al Smith, then tossed Senator Simmons into the discard heap because he opposed Smith. They were the only southern state that voted dry in the recent Literary Digest poll, but Senator Morrison, a militant dry, was soundly beaten by a wringing wet candidate. What do North Carolinians want anyway?"—Pageland (S. C.) Journal.

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well. Cardui is sold at drug stores here."

Why buy any second-choice tire when a GOOD YEAR costs no more?

The experience of tire-users is that Goodyear Tires give greatest value at every price—every year the public buys MILLIONS more Goodyears than any other make. That's a pretty definite indication of superior value.
