Surplus Peanuts
 Production Must Come Into Line With Consumption

The world knows that there is a surplus of peanuts. Not a surplus because there is not a demand, but a surplus because there is lack of ability to buy, an enforced surplus. We will do our part in removing this surplus from the edible market. The price we can pay is even lower than the present shelling market, but peanuts sold us will not come into competition with those sold the legitimate shellers. We are prepared to use one hundred thousand pounds per day for our purpose. Write us and send half pound sample of what you have. We will tell you what we can pay. We prefer them in bulk rather than in bags.
