

COTTON SUPPLY OF WORLD STILL NEAR HIGH PEAK

More Than Twice World Consumption During 1931-32

With the December estimate of the domestic crop larger than forecasts made early in the season, the estimated world supply of American cotton for 1932-33 is now only slightly less than the record supply of 1931-32 and is more than twice the world consumption of American cotton during 1931-32.

Domestic mill consumption from September to December, 1932, was materially above the like period of 1931 and 1930, and averaged about 75 per cent above the low point of July, 1932.

Prices of American cotton during 1932-33 remained fairly stable from mid-October to late January, and although substantially below the level reached in late August, they were, at the end of January, about a cent and a quarter above the low point of June, 1932, and about the same as a year earlier.

NEGRO LEADS IN LIVING AT HOME

Subsistence Farming Being Practiced by Colored Man in Vance

It was a lucky day for Pil Reed, a negro farmer in Vance County, when a local nurseryman decided a few years ago to quit the business and sell out his left-over stock for a few dollars.

Reed and his wife bought 50 peach trees, 50 apple trees, 6 pear trees, 6 grape vines, 2 pecan trees and 2 English walnut trees for $54. The peach trees died and the English walnuts have not done so well, but the other trees are living and have been bearing fruit for about three years.

The family could not find much of a sale for fruit, but the wife gave away considerable apples and about 30 bushels of peaches to neighbors. She also sold $7 worth of fruit and $35 worth of surplus vegetables.

"We had a dry season all over Vance County last year," says Mrs. Plummer, "but most of our folks kept on planting and kept on saving what they had grown. This negro family's just one example of what a family in very humble circumstances was able to do and we have other examples equally as good. Those of our people who grew what they could and saved all the food and feed possible are in a favorable condition so far as living is concerned."

Young People To Have Charge of Baptist Service

Following Sunday school at the Baptist church Sunday morning the pastor will preach.

At the evening hour, 7:30 o'clock, the young people of the Intermediate and Junior B. Y. P. U. will be in full charge of the services.

This program is to be put on by the children of the church and congregation and should be interesting to good attendance for these young people. The pastor suggests the use of American cotton. The small supply of Indian and the almost record supply of American indicate that this situation is likely to continue during the remainder of 1932-33.

On Monday morning, February 20, those children of the Oak City school who needed glasses, yet were unable to buy them, were taken to Williamston in a school truck to have their eyes examined and tested for glasses by Dr. Sawyer.

Preparations are being made for the tonsil clinic, which is to be held in the school building in the near future.

BEST TO GIVE UP ONE CROP IDEA

Diversification Is Greatest Need, Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus Declares

To Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, rural North Carolina's greatest need is "to get more and more away from the single money crop idea."

So he expressed himself in an article for the North Carolina Cotton Growers' Cooperative Association's sixth annual essay booklet which contains views of 51 leading North Carolinians on "Rural North Carolina's Greatest Need," subject of the contest.

"I am of course," said Governor Ehringhaus, "interested in anything which will help to provide a real market for one of our principal crops. I may say, however, that I am impressed with the idea that rural North Carolina's greatest need is to get more and more away from the single money crop idea, to encourage and keep going the live-at-home movement, to take advantage of every opportunity to give impetus to the livestock and poultry increase movement as suggested in my inaugural, and to bend its energies towards the finding of some practical way of voluntary application of the principles of cooperation to the problems of production."
