WORK PROJECTS ARE BROUGHT TO HALT THIS WEEK

Step Said To Have Been Taken To Force Needy To Cultivate Gardens

All relief projects will be stopped in instructions received here yesterday from Miss Mary P. Ward, district supervisor. A number of projects have already been suspended, but next week no relief projects will be under way unless county welfare heads are instructed between now and Monday to continue the work. Projects now in progress will continue through this ects will leave only the Red Cross headquarters for the unfortunate to turn to, it is understood.

At the present time there are about county since the first of the year. The number was greatly decreased when the spring opened up, and the unfortunates were directed to start gardens and other relief activities of their own. The number was again decreased a few days ago when the relief office in Raleigh ordered all projects requiring farm labor be suspend

The suspension of the work relief projects resulted, it is believed, when the unfortunates preferred to work a little and get ready cash rather than turn to the soil and cultivate gardens for themselves. Then, too, the projects at the 8 o'clock service. This pageant were receiving more attention in some counties than the ones supposed to and won first prize in a contest conget the relief were receiving,
