Russian Recognition Is Topic in Washington

Russian recognition has eclipsed disarmament, Cuba, British war debt discussion and preparations for the Pan-American conference as subjects of discussion in official Washington. It ranks with the democratic recovery plan as a major subject of conversation. Prospective Russian trade is viewed as promising stimulation to the cotton, cork products, copper and machinery businesses in this country. Electrical and agricultural implements that immediately were influenced by the announcement that Litvinoff will come to Washington to discuss the restoration of Russo-American relations with President Roosevelt.

Litvinoff's statement at the London economic conference that Soviet Russia was a potential customer for $1,000,000,000 worth of raw materials and machinery challenged the attention of American factories short on orders and farmers without a market.

THE LETTER-BOX

LET'S WRITE 'EM LETTERS

To the editor: How funny was Max's appeal to his former Sunday school class at Shelby to repeal the 18th amendment. And funnier yet is Mr. Farley's expressed intention to "appeal to us to repeal" on November 3 as evidence of our support of NRA. Let's write Mr. Farley and other wet leaders personal letters in this vein: Dear Mr. Farley: By all means come to North Carolina on November 3, for we deeply appreciate your labors in helping us to choose a great President, such as is Mr. Roosevelt. However, please change the subject of your address, for we just can't permit you to instruct us to purchase liquor to raise revenue for our "Uncle Sam." There are several striking reasons you mustn't so mislead us:

"We have paid our government much much more revenue annually since prohibition than we ever paid before, as an analysis of accounts in your own department will show.

We have been told that our Interior Department, of which Mr. Ickes is Secretary, is reserving more than $14,000,000 to employ Coast Guardsmen to chase rum-runners after Repeal; and yet the liquor forces begrudged the paltry sums directed toward prohibition enforcement.

Wets can't control liquor; they prove that when they drink the poison stuff.

Millions of Americans have become abstainers under prohibition, as an examination of our private lives will show. As a result of this progress, we know we are standing on the shoulders of our former selves, looking upward.

The most striking of all reasons is that true Americans can not bear to see "Old Glory" flying over liquor brothels. We love our flag too well to relish that.

If you should lift one little stone to turn our pathway backward, we would soon come to loathe you; worse than that, you would eventually hate and despise yourself; and that would be far more disastrous to you, Mr. Farley, than was that bitter rebuke to Mr. Hoover, so effectively handed him by the American people last November.

You just can't ask us to drink rum to raise revenue, Mr. Farley; you mustn't do that; you will not. You are just too noble and splendid a gentleman to stoop to such a thing.

Now, please, please do change the subject of your address to something more inspiring than "Repeal."

Sincerely (Your name). If, kind editor, all the dries in all the states which have not repealed would write similar letters to all our misguided wet friends, we could certainly relieve the depression in our Post Office Department considerably, even if we couldn't salvage the 18th amendment.

Mrs. VERNON A. WARD.
Robersonville, N. C.
