HASSELL ONLY BOX IN COUNTY TO VOTE DRY

Poplar Point Led for Repeal By 5-To-1 Count; Less Than 1,900 Votes Cast

Martin County voters hooked arms with the weather Tuesday afternoon and embarked upon the waters to cast a wet vote by a count of 1,168 to 664. Hassell precinct maintained its hold on the ground, while Williams dipped two toes in the water. But Poplar Point jumped overboard clothes and all to sink or swin, the district going wet by slightly more than a five to one majority.

The vote, tabulated below by The Enterprise, was verified by the canvassers here yesterday. The result is about as predicted - a small vote with a majority for the wets. Approximately 1,832 votes were cast in the election as compared with 3,889 in the last general election in this

Market Ends Another Fine Week Today

The Williamston tobacco market completes another successful week in the marketing of the golden leaf, the total sales surpassing those of last week by a substantial margin. Averages, ranging around 35 cents, were numerous, while the market average continued above the 20-cent

Weather conditions have been very favorable for good sales, and the market here figured prominently in the sale of tobacco from more than one-half dozen counties this week.

The outlook continues bright on the Williamston market, farmers generally being more than well pleased with their sales. Growers, selling on the market here this week, stated they received anywhere from five to 10 cents a pound more for their offerings than they had hoped to

In forwarding several thousand letters to growers in this section this week for the Roanoke-Dixie Warehouse, one of the leading selling units in the belt, an error slipped by the printers. Farmers who have been selling with the house will readily recognize the mistake, and others will be convinced that the house and market cannot be surpassed in as far as the successful sale of tobacco is concerned.
