Should Back Up The Law

Temperance has been talked on nearly every corner for months. Especially have those who favored repeal of the 18th amendment talked temperance. And it is good to preach temperance to all people.

Now that we have voted against repeal and will not have legal liquor in North Carolina, it is a good time for the dries to fall in line and stop drinking and get behind the law enforcement. If they will only do so and with the help of those ardent repealists who pleaded so hard for legal liquor they could have temperance. And we will be getting somewhere.

There is one distinct evil in the country and that is alcohol. It reaches the people in two ways, one by legal sanction and the other illegally. Were it not for the two fellows, the one who wants to sell it legally and the one who sells it illegally, the traffic and all drunkenness would soon play out. So far as we know there has never been a law legalizing the handling of liquor which was not flagrantly violated and liquor went to the people both legally and illegally.

The two classes of alcoholic venders are both practically the same in their desires, the motive being to traffic for the money there is in it.

If we have legal liquor, of course we will have more than if we have only the moonshine bootleg handler, and it will be harder to detect if we have two sources rather than the illegal only. However, the major task is to teach and practice temperance. Every child should be taught the baneful effect of liquor. Parents need to practice temperance. And when we do our dead level best by all the dries practicing temperance and all the wets preaching temperance, it is going to come pretty near breaking up the moonshiner and bootleggers. And how much better and happier we will all be.

Teach Youth Uselessness Of War

The gun factories of Germany seem to have achieved full value in their Hitler investment. There is nothing that will go farther to aggravate and kindle the war spirit in the nations than the course Hitler is pursuing. Nothing pleases better the manufacturers of war materials than war talk. Bethlehem Steel wants to sell armor plate; Dupont wants to sell powder, and so on around the world. If the conscience of the world could be so aroused that only the wealthy and high officials could be called in the first draft, we would see a difference.

All previous wars have been fought mainly by the poor man for the rich man. And all the poor man has received was wounds and even death, and his grieving family being told how bravely he died.

Teach youth how brutal and useless war is, rather than tell them what a noble thing it is to go out to fight, kill and bankrupt nations.

Join The Red Cross

The Red Cross roll call gives us all an opportunity to do a good deed and not be hurt. Contributing to this organization is a deed that will make all good people feel happy and will do some unfortunate and needy man, woman, or child good.

It should inspire us to know that we can place a dollar in the Red Cross treasury and know that it will flow on the streams of mercy and service to help the poor and needy. Remember, when the committee comes, that they are not on a mission of selfishness but are giving their time and service.

Don't let them pass without making your contribution.

Danger In Speed

Twelve hundred miles in four hours is just too fast for man to travel. Yet, that record was attempted by Jimmy Weddell last week in a flight from New York to Miami. Trouble developed to his plane and the flier was forced to land in Raleigh for repairs. He, however, had made the 450 mile trip from New York in 89 minutes, just a little better than 300 miles an hour.

Man is still striving to excel, especially in physical achievements, and it may be that we are trying too hard to cover space that we are neglecting to practice some of the needed virtues. In fact, many of us are apparently fast enough already and possibly too fast.

There is certainly grave danger in traveling at the rate of more than 5 miles a minute, and not a great deal to gain.

No Repudiation

No, North Carolina did not repudiate President Roosevelt in its vote on November 7, but it did tell Jim Farley and J. W. Bailey where to get off. They told them where to get off because, at heart, North Carolinians believe both of those men would crucify the president's policies from the back. Everyone remembers Mr. Bailey's flimsy explanation for his congressional acts last spring. If the President gets knifed during his administration, it will be by those fellow who pose as his friends.

Up To Tobacco Farmer

Tobacco Farmers, get ready to sign the acreage control agreement which will soon be presented. There is no other way to maintain profitable prices for any of our crops unless we all pull together, and produce enough to meet the needs without a great surplus to reduce prices below the cost of production.

Now is the time to help ourselves while the government is standing by ready to help us.

Opposed To Saloons

Rockingham Post-Dispatch.

What caused this State to go dry by over 175,000 majority?

It wasn't the question of repeal. It wasn't the work of the preachers. It wasn't that the folks don't like or want their liquor. No; it was because the mass of the people are determined that no matter how much bootleg liquor is handled, we will not tolerate the return of saloons. In fact, the next legislature may be asked to revoke all beer permits, and prohibit beer from the State.

Saloons is the key to the entire situation. True, wets claimed that the sole issue was repeal. That the Turlington act was not in dispute. But the folks thought differently, were determined in no uncertain terms to tell the next legislature that the Turlington act shall not be changed.

Wolves In Sheep's Clothing

News and Observer.

Nothing more reprehensible has been disclosed in recent investigations before Senate committees than the fact that officials and employees of the American Farm Bureau Federation put on the auction block the influence of the American farmer. M. S. Winder, executive secretary of the Farm Bureau, was forced to resign his position after the disclosures, but that will not blot out the sordid record.

Sent to Washington to represent the American farmer, enjoying the confidence of the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Winder peddled his prestige as the chosen and trusted officer of a great farm organization, offering to sell it for whatever cash he could collect in the market place.

It was brought out in the investigation before a Senate committee investigating ship subsidies that Mr. Winder wrote the ship owners that if they would put up $94,750 the whole influence of the American Farm Bureau Federation would be thrown into an "educational campaign" for government support for the merchant marine. In graphic form, he presented alluringly his wares, the sweat and blood of millions of farmers, as follows:

Fortunately the American Farm Bureau Federation is in a position to make this appeal most effectively—

With a membership of over 1,250,000 farm families—

With 1,937 county farm bureau organizations—

With State organizations completely organized and functioning—

With 6,000 salaried employees—

With a national headquarters in Chicago (legislative headquarters in Washington), embracing 11 special departments, each in charge of a trained specialist and staff.

When the ship owners did not fall for his first offer, he reduced his price to $30,000 and then to $15,000, but without success. The ship owners were not above paying huge fees to lobbyists, but couldn't see how they would be benefitted by buying the influence of this great farm organization, which was being peddled about for whatever it would bring in dollars and cents. But there were organizations who did contribute to the "educational campaigns," among them the National Electric Light Association, which put up $31,000, and the National Lumber Association, which contributed $15,000. The copper and cement associations put up smaller sums.

Tar Heel Boys

Cleveland Star.

Some time ago one of these pesky newspapermen, looking about for something to criticize, noticed the names of a number of freshmen enrolled at State College. He found several family names not so common in North Carolina and, being a pesky fellow, wondered if they were good football players. Immediately, there came a reply from some State College alumnus—Dave Clark, as we remember—saying that very few of these "furriners," if any, played football. After a chuckle or two we forgot the matter until late last week when we noticed a photo of the State College freshmen and the names of the young hopefuls pictured. Among them were such good old Tar Heel-Virginia Dare-Roanoke Island cognomens as these: Klaver, Kirschner, Jashwhich, Cabe, Chiemigo, Reinisch, Cara, Mas, Bardes, Ryneska, Chilson, Regdon, Polinsky, Matys, Hein, Barb, Schlossberg, Boyea and Spitalnik. In the lot, however, were a few such names as Brown, Tatum, McLaughlin and Clark, so we suppose after all that it is not a foreign invasion.
