VIEWS GIVEN ON PROPOSED CONSTITUTION

150 Pages Devoted to Tell Principal Issues Involved In Proposed Change

All of the issues involved in the proposed constitution for North Carolina are presented from a non-partisan point of view and are subjected to a searching analysis in the current issue of "Popular Government," the official organ of the Institute of Government, which has just been received by local county and city officials and many members of the bar.

The study was made by Dillard S. Gardner and Henry Brandis, associate directors of the institute. The comprehensive and fair treatment given the proposed basic law has evoked much favorable comment from those who have seen advance copies of the publication.

It required 150 pages for this issue of the booklet to tell the full story about the constitution. It begins with an historical outline of the constitutions of North Carolina—past, present and proposed. It compares the provisions of the present and proposed constitutions, the principal issues involved and the main considerations urged for and against it by its advocates and opponents.

The booklet is divided into eleven articles under the following general headings: "The Bill of Rights," "The Legislative Department," "The Executive Department," "The Judicial Department," "Revenue, Taxation and Public Debt," "Suffrage and Eligibility to Office," "Education," "Home-steads and Exemptions," "Public Welfare, Institutions and Punishments," "Agriculture, Industry and Miscellaneous," and "Amendments, Existing Laws and Offices."

"The Institute of Government neither sponsors nor opposes the proposed Constitution," said Albert Coates, director. "It does propose to stimulate free and open discussion of this thorough-going revision of our fundamental law in free and open forums throughout the State. In the effort to make this analysis fair and impartial Mr. Gardner and Mr. Brandis have (1) discussed it with its leading advocates and opponents, (2) studied their public utterances, (3) submitted the results to them in manuscript form for further suggestions and criticisms, (4) quoted from their own arguments in their own words, and (5) sent advance copies to representatives of groups of officers and citizens throughout the state in order to incorporate all points of view into the final printing. Other issues and points of view which will inevitably develop as discussion proceeds will be correlated and set forth in subsequent issues.

NCERA MEET IN WASHINGTON TO MAKE NEW PLANS

Various Counties to Be Represented at Meeting August 16

North Carolina Emergency Relief Administration farm and garden supervisors, case workers and vocational agriculture teachers will meet in Washington, N. C., August 16 to formulate plans for a fall and winter farming program under the Rural Rehabilitation Division of the NCERA. The meeting was called by George Ross, State director of rural rehabilitation, and Roy H. Thomas, State supervisor of agricultural education.

Counties to be represented at the Washington meeting are Beaufort, Hyde, Dare, Tyrrell, Washington and Martin.

Aims of the program which is to be launched in the district embraced by the above named counties, and in all sections of North Carolina, are to increase the vocational ability of farm families now on relief by teaching them better methods of curing, storing and preserving foods.

The program also is aimed towards giving instruction on rural problems and assisting in planning local rural rehabilitation programs by planning rotations, farm layouts, terracing, pastures and other land improvements and instructions in new and improved practices for both agriculture and local industry.

The vocational agriculture teachers, farm and garden supervisors, and case workers in each county will direct the work of the program, and its supervision.

Austrian Winter Peas Suggested For Fall

Though all three of the winter-growing legumes commonly planted in North Carolina each fall are nearly equal in value for forage and soil improvement, it appears that this is the year to plant heavily for Austrian winter peas.

"My reason for making this suggestion is that the seed of the Austrian pea is comparatively low in price as compared with crimson clover and vetch," says Enos C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College. "Field demonstrations show that when 'other' things are added to crimson clover, vetch and Austrian winter peas make about the same yield of hay. They also give about the same increase in soil fertility when turned under; but, for some reason crimson clover seed and vetch seed are, high in price this season and

Milk Ordinance

At a meeting of the Board of Town Commissioners held at the regular place of meeting on the 18th day of July, 1934, an ordinance was passed adapting the United States Public Health Service Milk Ordinance requiring inspection, grading, labelling and placarding all milk and/or milk products to be sold within the police jurisdiction of the Town of Williamston on and after thirty days from the above date, and reference is given to said Ordinance and Code on file in the office of G. H. Harrison, Town Clerk.

if the winter peas may be purchased at a less price there is no good reason why they may not be substituted for vetch and clover."

Blair says the price of crimson clover seed is nearly three times and the price of vetch seed is over twice that being asked for Austrian winter peas. Assuming that 20 pounds of either clover or vetch or 30 pounds of Austrian peas is the right amount to sow on one acre of land, the cost of seeding the vetch is 50 per cent more than for the peas and the cost of seeding crimson clover is about 200 per cent more.

He suggests that all growers planning to sow a winter cover crop this fall, investigate the possibility of planting the Austrian peas.
