More Money and Less Debts

The monetary question, which is the most important of all the proposed reforms, seems to have been dropped. Yet before we ever meet the legitimate needs of the country we must have a sensible, sane money system run entirely by the government and not by the grafting bankers.

For many years our government has had very little to do with its money system. We struggled for half a century under our old banking laws. In December, 1913, the country had become so disgusted with the old order of things that Congress passed the Federal Reserve Act, which had as one of its major purposes, "the furnishing of a more elastic currency," yet we have had no increase or elasticity. Practically the same amount of currency is in existence and much less gold. The Federal Reserve system has been administered in every detail by the bankers who own it, since the government does not own a penny of the stock of the Federal Reserve system. It is run entirely by bankers who are vested with the power to curtail or expand at their will, and they always prefer to curtail, because they can collect more interest.

This line-up of bankers and their allied bondholders own the gold as well as the bonds, and they are so expert at the fleeing game that they are collecting from the government itself more than 14 per cent interest on every dollar in existence every year. There are less than $7,000,000,000 in existence in the United States, and yet our government owes the banks and bondholders more than 27 billions of dollars, which means that we owe bondholders $4 for every $1 they actually own.

The bankers have been so skillful and the government so slothful and ignorant that they have permitted the bankers to manipulate all of our money, all of our business, all of our debts, and collect interest enough from us to practically bankrupt us—and yet our folks are stupid enough to let them continue to do it. And the very fellows who are sucking the blood out of the government are always harping against debts.

Nobody denies the shrewdness of bondholders and bankers, because anybody who can loan the money of the country four times to the government and collect interest out of it every time has some inherent ability. But when the government is too stupid to see what they are doing and fails to stop that kind of business by issuing more money from their presses, it is time for us to stop and do a little figuring and perhaps change a few Congressmen.

We have overstrained our currency system too long, which has forced us to borrow from sharks who have always swallowed us up whenever they get good and hungry. They lower prices at will and take farms, homes, and food and clothing from the folks, forcing them to issue new bonds and make new mortgages. More money and less debts will solve the problem. Mr. President.

Keep the Plunderers Out

No people of any country since the beginning of the history of man have been pillaged and robbed as badly as we Americans. Beginning with our public domain, and running on down to almost every contract the country has made, we have been the victims of grafters in almost every possible manner.

First our choice western lands were grabbed up by the railroads, and they made billions. They chiseled us out of our mineral and oil lands worth many billions, and we have been taxed to pay subsidies to enrich railroads and steamship lines. We have been taxed to pay shipbuilders great profits for every boat we have ever had built. In fact, the government has been in the hands of grafters most of the time for half a century. Every investigation that Congress has made shows that we have paid too much for what we have gotten in nearly every deal we have made.

The very fellows who have robbed, cheated and beaten the government are the same fellows who are fighting the new deal. They are the same fellows who ruled and ran Mr. Hoover's administration at the time so many bank and business failures took place.

Voters don't forget the time and place: Hoover's administration, in the United States.

Now, watch Mr. Hoover try to help fool the folks again. He wants to take the reins of government out of the hands of democracy and restore them to a gang that has well-nigh gobbled up all the wealth the government ever possessed.

An Opportunity To Do Better

Only two more months and the hundreds of thousands of voters of North Carolina will say whether they favor retaining the old constitution or whether they favor the proposed amendments.

We know that making rules under which future generations will have to live and move is a job that requires great wisdom. Therefore, we now have the opportunity to make a few changes. Most of them are decidedly better, or at least are an improvement over the old.

Government is the outgrowth of the experience of past generations. Most of these experiences have been changed and improved on from time to time, and no one generation has been able to formulate a code that would take care of all the needs of the coming generation. We may cling to the old Constitution, but if we do we will certainly miss some good governmental functions that our own national government has tried and which most of the states of the Union have tried with much success.

Now is the time to study the constitution in order that we may vote wisely in November.

Up To Youth

The young people of the world today are the folks who are going to regulate the wars of the future. Youth has discovered that their part in war is to go into the trenches and be shot down or blown up with bombs or perhaps poisoned to death with gas. They have discovered that to die facing a fellow man is to die like a fool. Youth has discovered that they do not hate the other fellow and that he hates to kill his brother, man, who may leave a widow and child, or brothers and sisters, or a father and mother.

Truly the young people have learned a lot of things about war. They know that even if they go to war and do not happen to kill some other man or get killed themselves they will go home and put their necks in a tax yoke that will burden them to the very end of their lives, and that the coffin in which they are buried will bear a war tax.

The only fellow who wants war is the fellow who doesn't care who gets killed nor who has to pay taxes just so he can make millions.

Young men, tell the nations you were not made to kill men, but to help men.

The Highway Toll

Elkin Tribune. According to figures submitted in the report made by the Motor Vehicle Bureau, 455 lives were sacrificed on North Carolina's magnificent highways during the first seven months of the present year. Drunken, reckless, and hit-and-run drivers are charged with most of this toll, while simple carelessness and crave of speed on the part of the motorists furnish cause for the balance.

The records show that drunken drivers were responsible for 7 deaths; speeders slew 16; recklessness resulted in 17 fatalities and 5 lives were lost in grade-crossing mishaps; 7 children were struck down while at play, 4 of them being the victims of hit-and-run varmits, not yet made to account for their crime.

These fatalities are by no means the only loss. There must be added the injuries that did not prove fatal and the material loss involved, and these present abundant reasons why we should be pulled up with a jerk.

We have this long list of fatalities, injuries, and damage to property because the motorist has not yet grasped the meaning of his responsibilities. He refuses to drink his liquor and remain under the steering wheel; he does not concern himself with what or who is around the bend or across the brow of the hill; he does not place the proper value on the lives of little children; he is not going anywhere in particular, but he craves speed and is in a powerful hurry to get there.

Until motorists in general desert their present frame of mind, nothing much can be done about it unless we provide a driver's license law with teeth—one that will keep his toe off the accelerator after he has once proved his recklessness.

A Man Stands Up

News and Observer. While the chief of police of High Point may have had the letter of the law in support of his refusal to accept the telegraphic bond of Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, for a young Socialist in jail there on a charge of strike trespassing, everybody else in North Carolina knows that by telephone, telegraph, letter or voice Frank Graham's word is as good as his bond.

They also know that in any time of crisis in North Carolina Frank Graham can be depended upon to take without flinching the liberal position and the criticism from conservatives which the taking of that position entails. Dr. Graham undertook to go on the bond of the young Socialist, who was arrested with a lot of non-Socialists, not because he shares that young man's economic views, but because, having known the young man as a student, he was "confident you have committed no crime."

Such a willingness to stand by his faith in men and to aid them in securing an even-handed justice is needed in North Carolina today, when there is real danger that the forces of government are more preoccupied with the preservation of the rights of property than safeguarding the rights of men. Liberals in North Carolina today who wish the maintenance of order but not the use of timidity as an excuse for extra-legal strike breaking, who wish the protection of property rights but not at the expense of human rights, who know that for all the talk of violence and for all the gleaming bayonets there has not been one drop of blood spilled by the strikers, will thank God that the courage of one great liberal gleams also in the present darkness.

IRISH POTATO GROWERS MEET SEPTEMBER 20

Congressman Lindsay Warren To Preside; AAA To Be Represented

Washington, N. C., September 12.—Just as stricken tobacco farmers a year ago went forth to Washington, D. C., so are stricken potato farmers preparing to converge on Washington, N. C., on September 20 to attend a great potato meeting called by Congressman Lindsay C. Warren, who has agreed to champion their cause.

Estimates as to the number who will attend jump each day as different sections report their interest and their interest and determination to come. The meeting will open at 10:30 a. m. in the John H. Small School Building, which will seat 800.

Mr. Warren has made it plain that it is to be a growers' meeting and that the decision for a plan of action will be made by men who grow potatoes rather than those who contract for their growth. He has been assured that the meeting has the deep interest of the Department of Agriculture and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and he has painted to Chester C. Davis, Administrator of the AAA the picture of the plight of the grower. The administration will send to the meeting either Mr. Davis himself, or Harry R. Wellman, chief of the general crops section, or his assistant, Porter R. Taylor. The Department of Agriculture will be represented by A. E. Mercker, its potato specialist. Congressman Warren is to preside over the meetings, which Mr. Davis says he wishes to "make an outstanding milestone in developing a potato program."

Although relief was secured for the tobacco grower, it is going to be a much harder proposition for the man who grows potatoes. Tobacco was a basic commodity under the original Agricultural Adjustment Act, and potatoes have not yet been included.

While Congressman Warren is firm in the opinion that potatoes should be made a basic commodity, he and others agree that even if successful in getting them included that it would probably be too late for the 1935 crop. The present emergency is therefore to curtail the 1935 acreage, and to this end there must be uniform action in the early potato-growing states. Delegations from Virginia and South Carolina have already stated they will attend.

Those who know Congressman Warren believe that the meeting held his auspices will be one of action and that a definite program will be formulated. His great work in the tobacco program is well known and his decision to lead the fight for the potato farmer has met with wide commendation.

Exercise Care In Changing Food for Developing Chicks

Developing pullets should not be changed from developing mash and placed on laying mash before they come up to 25 percent production. The laying mash stimulates egg production which may cause the immature birds to stop growing and it is better to have a flock with high vitality than to have a high egg production at the expense of body vigor. Be sure the birds are fully developed and producing about 25 percent before making the change.

Nash Farmers Reported Little Excess in Cotton

Very few cotton farmers in Nash County planted more than their allotted acres, says C. S. Mintz, assistant agent. Good tobacco prices have put the growers in fine spirits.

Very Much Improved After Taking Cardui

"I have suffered a great deal from cramping," writes Mrs. W. A. Sewell, Sr., of Waco, Texas. "I would chill and have to go to bed for about three days at a time. I would have a dull, tired, sleepy feeling. A friend told me to try Cardui, thinking it would help me—and it did. I am very much improved and do not spend the time in bed. I certainly can recommend Cardui to other sufferers." Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

MALARIA

Speedy Relief of Chills and Fever

Don't let Malaria tear you apart with its maddening chills and burning fever. Treat to no home-made or more makeshift remedies. Take the medicine prepared especially for Malaria—Grove's Tastesen Chills Tonic.

Grove's Tastesen Chills Tonic gives real relief from Malaria because it's a scientific combination of tannic acid and iron. The tannic acid kills the Malaria bacteria in the blood. The iron builds up the system and helps fortify against further attack. At the first sign of any attack of Malaria take Grove's Tastesen Chills Tonic. Better still take it regularly during the Malaria season to ward off the disease. Grove's Tastesen Chills Tonic is absolutely harmless and tastes good.

Grove's Tastesen Chills Tonic now comes in two sizes, 50c and $1. The $1 size contains 200 grains much as the 50c size and gives you 100% more for your money. Get a bottle today at any store.
