House rental committee: Mrs. F. U. Barnes reported that the club had been rented three times.

The president stated that a physician was expected here in the near future.

NEW PLYMOUTH NOW ON DISPLAY

Being Shown at Plymouth Sales and Service Show Room in Robersonville

Embracing all the new features and latest creations in automobile transport, the New 1935 Plymouth went on display at the showrooms of the Plymouth Sales and Service show room in Robersonville this week.

Though the new car is of the air-flow type, its streamlining is not as radical as those on some cars. Included in the marked changes are improved braking, a new transmission, new clutch, and a steadiness in steering that of itself is a positive thrill.

In the 1935 Plymouth, front springs and rear springs carry approximately the same weight, have the same frequency and all parts of the chassis ride the same. Front-end bounce is controlled by double-acting shock absorbers. The sway eliminator acts as a third spring and keeps the car on an even keel in making turns.

Christmas Trees By MARJORIE HAYES in Boston Herald

NEARLY every one has a Christmas tree nowadays, but if you had been a child in America a hundred years ago the chances are that you might never have seen one. The custom was universal in England many years before it was very common here, except in communities of German or Scandinavian settlers.

An English monk named Winfred who had gone as a missionary into Germany, came upon some priests about to sacrifice the young prince Asulf to the god Thor beneath the "blood oak." He stopped their ceremonies and ordered them to cut down the oak, whereupon a young fir tree appeared in its place which Winfred told them signified the tree of life, or of Christly living.

The two trees most commonly used for Christmas trees are the spruce and fir. They look very much alike, but the spruce is likely to shed its needles after two or three days in the house, while the fir remains in good condition much longer. There are several ways in which you may distinguish them, first the cones. Those of the spruce hang downward while the cones of the fir are held erect. The spruce tree is pyramidal in shape, the long cones hanging from the branches near the top. The needles are arranged in spiral rows around the stem, those at the top pointing sharply upward. They have three or four distinctly angled sides. Some common varieties are the red, black, white and Norway spruce. Fir trees in various sections of the country are the balsam firs which grow abundantly in the mountains and which we find displayed in our markets at Christmas time. The fir is shaped much like the spruce, but the needles are flat and blunt, and usually spread feather-wise from two sides of the stem only. They are dark green above and silvery beneath. The dark purple cones stand erect, glistening with balsam near the top. Balsam also exudes from the trunk, and is used for medicine. The fresh needles are used as a stuffing for sweet-smelling balsam pillows.

Another evergreen sometimes used as a Christmas tree is the hemlock. It is more slender than the spruce, with feathery waving branches which grow very close to the ground. The needles are arranged in two flat rows on the twigs, and have tiny stomas. They are Living Christmas Trees Longer life for Christmas trees is advocated by the United States forest service. In a note suggesting that a living tree with roots properly balled and packed in a box may be used indoors and later set out to beautify the grounds. Children Like to Buy Children take pride in being able to buy their own gifts for members of the family and for friends. Often mothers find their ingenuity put to severe test to find ideas enough to go round in the necessary limited price range.

Christmas Air Every big London market has its own special characteristics. One of the most characteristic of all is London-hall market, because of its position and the essentially friendly family air about it. During the Christmas season the air is positively festive.
