Keep Pullets on Range As Long As Possible
Pullets should not be moved from the range shelter to the laying house until the majority are ready to come into production. Even then, if layers are still in the house, the pullets should not be moved until the house has been thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. The shelters can be moved from range to range and the pullets should be kept on these ranges as long as possible, especially if the pasture about the laying house is poor.

TURNIPS MAY BE FED IN PLACE OF SILAGE TO COWS

Seed for Such a Crop To Be Planted the Early Part of August

Turnips are being recommended as substitute cow feed for dairymen who do not have enough silage to carry their herds through the winter.

Turnips are palatable, nourishing, and easily digested, points out John A. Arey, extension dairyman at N. C. State College.

For feeding this coming winter, he says, the purple top turnip is probably the best variety to sow now. The seed should be in the ground by August 10, he adds.

The seed bed should be well pulverized. Then 500 to 600 pounds of high grade fertilizer per acre should be drilled broadcast into the soil. After being sown, the seed may be covered lightly with a weeder or a small brush.

On fertile, moist soils, a yield of six to eight tons of turnips per acre can be expected, Arey states. On less favorable soils, the yield will naturally be somewhat less.

Enough seed should be sown to provide each average size sow with 25 to 30 pounds of turnip roots each day during the months when silage is customarily fed.

After the turnips have been harvested, they may be protected from freezing by removing the tops and storing the roots in a cellar or by placing them in a hill as is used for sweet potatoes.

If the roots are chopped into small pieces just before feeding time, the cows will find them easier to eat and there will be less danger of choking. Feed the turnips just after milking time to avoid getting any of the turnip flavor in the milk.

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Theodor's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Theodor's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."
