Better Seed Are Obtained When Taken for the Second Picking

The best cotton seed for planting is usually secured from the second picking.

The first picking is often green and heavy with moisture, while the last pickings are frequently

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT
Raleigh, July 30th, 1935.
I, DAN C. BONEY, Insurance Commissioner, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct abstract of the statement of the Union Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Providence, R. I., filed with this department, showing the condition of said company, on the 31st day of December, 1934.

light and damaged by boll weevils. However, good seed may be secured from the first picking if there has been no rain on it, said P. H. Kime, plant breeder for the Agricultural Experiment Station at State College.
After the cotton is picked, it should be stored in a well ventilated house and spread out to dry as much as possible, he said. Damp cotton left in a large pile usually develops enough heat to impair the germinating power of the seed.
Cotton from which the seed is to be saved for planting should be held until after the rush of the ginning season, Kime added, so that the ginner will have more time to keep the seed from getting clean up the gin.
mixed with other varieties at the gin, the seed roll should be dropped, the gin and conveyor pipes cleaned, the floor swept, and the seed caught on the floor and bagged.

Do not let the seed pass through the conveyor, Kime warned, as it is almost impossible to clean the conveyor of all seed left from previous ginnings.
If the quality of the seed is good this year, he continued, it is advisable to save enough for two or three years. Next year's crop may be badly weather damaged, but good seed held over for several years, will not deteriorate if stored properly.
In fact, Kime pointed out, disease organisms often are found on the seed will die in about two years, leaving the seed fairly free from disease after it has been stored for at least two seasons.

Feed Unmarketable Cull Sweet Potatoes Dairy Cows on Farm
Tubers and Vines Produce Milk and Butter Of High Quality
Unmarketable sweet potatoes may be fed to dairy cattle with excellent results, says R. H. Ruffner, head of the animal husbandry department at State College.
Both the tubers and the vines make a good, palatable feed which will produce milk and butter of high quality.
But livestock men can afford to feed only cull potatoes or those which cannot be marketed for human consumption at a fairly good price, Ruffner pointed out.
Sweet potatoes contain about one-fourth the total feed value of an equal weight of corn. Consequently, dairymen cannot afford to allow more than one-fourth the price of corn for the sweet potatoes.
Sweet potatoes may be fed cows in place of corn silage. Since there are 25 pounds of digestible nutrients in 100 pounds of potatoes, while an equal weight of silage contains only 17 pounds, the cows will not need as much potato feed as silage.
When sweet potatoes are fed, the cows should also get eight to ten pounds of legume hay, to balance the ration, as potatoes consist mostly of starch and sugar, Ruffner stated.
From 25 to 30 pounds of potatoes a day may be fed the average cow, but it is advisable to feed only five to ten pounds a day at the start. The quantity may be increased gradually as the cows learn to eat the roots.
The sweet potato vines may be grazed off by the cows, or they may be pulled and fed in the barn. Each cow can consume from 30 to 40 pounds of vines a day. Do not allow them to eat more than this amount, Ruffner added.

Destroy Stalks To Check Boll Weevil
North Carolina cotton growers are being urged to wage a stiff battle against boll weevils this fall to prevent heavy infestations of the crop next year.
So widespread were the infestations this season that many of the weevils will survive the winter unless they are destroyed in the fall, said C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at State College.
As soon as the cotton has been picked, he said, the growers should cut down all the stalks and plow them under.
Cutting the stalks deprives the weevils of their food and plowing the stalks under will kill weevils which might otherwise survive the winter.
If the stalks are left to grow until frost, the weevils will approach winter in a healthy, vigorous condition, Brannon added, and they will be well able to withstand the cold weather.
An ounce of prevention is worth several pounds of cure, he declared, and the destruction of boll weevils in fall and winter is one of the best control methods known.
Furthermore, he added, the quicker that the stalks can be cut and plowed under, the better is the chance of destroying most of the weevils.

Should Fertilize Winter Crops Planted for Hay
In many sections the custom is to sow fall crops after corn, tobacco or cotton without fertilization on the supposition that there is enough fertilizer left from the spring application to grow another crop. It is true that some of the fertilizer is still in the soil but except on very fertile soil, some fertilizer should be applied for the fall crops.
Coastal Plain soils 400 pounds of an 8-4-4 mixture should be applied. This may be supplemented with a top dressing of from 50 to 100 pounds of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia next March 1.

October 1 Best Time to Cut Lespedeza Crop For Seed
The best time to cut lespedeza for seed of the Korean variety is about the first of October, and the other varieties just after the first hard frost. After being left in the barn for a few weeks the Korean seed is threshed on a grain separator. Seed from the other varieties are harvested with a seed pan attached to the cutter bar of a mowing machine. Plans for building a seed pan may be secured free by writing to the Agricultural Editor, State College, Raleigh, N. C.
