The Government's Rights

The power trusts of the nation—which have enjoyed the God-given natural resources that should be used for the good of the whole people, but which have been turned over to these corporations for a mere bagatelle—now say that nobody should have the right to make electricity but themselves, and they are trying to get the courts to so declare.

If the courts should so rule, then the government should step in and take from these companies the eminent domain which they have used freely for so long. We cannot conceive of the government having the right to turn over the property of the people to these concerns and yet not have the right to go into the power business for itself.

Everything that the government has owned that had value seems to have been gobbled up by people who now defy the power of the government to exercise any authority that would conflict with their own schemes.

If the government has had the right to give the property of the public away, then it should have the right to recapture it for the benefit of the public.

Of course, people generally fear their Supreme Court after the astounding decisions handed down by it recently.

The Handwriting on the Wall

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, possibly the world's most powerful corporation, has either had a change of heart or seen the handwriting on the wall, as it has voluntarily reduced its charges for long distance messages recently. The rate from Charlotte to Atlanta, Ga., formerly $1.50, has been reduced 45 cents to $1.05. All Sunday rates have been reduced and most night rates are lower. The reductions do not apply, however, to messages on which the charge has been 35 cents or less.

Of course, this is only a small concession, but it will help some, and it shows a change of heart on the part of the corporation. And, of course, they do not want to show their books to the public.

The Best Thing Yet Presented

Senator Norris is proposing a bill in Congress to require the unanimous vote of the Supreme Court to annul acts of the Congress, which bill seems to be the best thing presented so far to save the liberties of the people. It seems that the Congress has the right to prescribe the rules and procedure to be followed by the courts.

Under the present arrangement, with a simple majority vote of the court governing its decisions, one man may enslave or free the people simply by casting his vote for or against a particular law. Personally, we do not think that a partisan court is always infallible. A judge who has always been employed by a system that demands a certain line of personal influence cannot be trusted. He will not break away from the friends who have nurtured and fed him when their interests are at stake. It would be just as natural for a boy to break away from the love of his mother as it is for a lawyer to break away from the hand that has fed him simply because he has been elevated to the Supreme Bench.

Most men are too weak to withstand high pressure, and this applies even to the men who sit in high places in law-making bodies and in the judiciary. There are entirely too many men chosen from the employ of big interests to make our laws and our court decisions. Lawmakers and judges should never be chosen from the field of corporation-trained lawyers.

Simpler System of Justice

A good many people seem not to want justice. The Hauptmann case is a point in question.

A court and jury passed on the case and declared his guilt under the laws of the state of New Jersey. After appealing to the courts charged with the duty of ascertaining if the law had been carefully and honestly administered; it was found that it had; then a general tirade of criticism from every quarter of the globe set in, apparently to try to gain sympathy and confuse the minds of many who would begin to say that there was doubt in their minds. And Hauptmann is still here, without paying the debt to society which has been found to be due.

In our own state prison, there are 18 men on death row, their executions being delayed not because there is any grave doubt about their guilt but because somebody is trying to thwart and hamper the law.

When we learn that kidnapers, rapists, and murderers are not worthy to live—and so declared by the laws of our country—and we fall in line with the most civilized and cultured nations of the earth, it will be better for us. In England or France Hauptmann would have paid the penalty long ago, and others would have known that the law meant business and would respect it.

Most people seem not so much concerned when a good man is killed in an automobile wreck or some other accident, but when the worst man in the community commits a capital felony they fly into a fit, shed crocodile tears, and try to free him. We need a simpler system of court procedure and more speed in the execution of its judgments.

Reflecting a Great Need

The people guessed right when they said the court did not know what it was doing in its AAA decision. Now the court has passed on the rice case, which seems to have jammed the first decision in a hole, and it is practically bogged down in its own tracks.

What we need is a new constitution—one that the judges themselves can agree upon and respect, so that the people can respect the court.

THE MIRACLE OF MAN O' WAR

AMONG ALL THE HORSES that have thrilled sports-loving America, Man O' War holds first place. Nature favored him as she did no other. To him she gave her greatest gift—perfect natural balance of all the elements that go to make a champion.

Back through the ages, Nature began the miracle of Man O' War. Speed from one strain, courage from another, endurance from still another—blended at last into perfect balance in this horse with the natural ability to prove his superior qualities every time he ran. A champion in every respect.

And here's another champion—another of Nature's miracles—Natural Chilean Nitrate. With its natural balance of vital impurities over and above its nitrogen, this natural fertilizer stands out as a champion should, by its everlasting ability to produce. Nature herself blended the vital spark into Natural Chilean. It's there—the natural blend and balance of many elements—the vital impurities. That's why Natural Chilean is the logical nitrogen for your crops.
