Farmers Who Secure Resettlement Loans Must Follow Plans

Farm and Home Management Program Outlined To Each Borrower

Raleigh.—A fundamental change in agricultural credit policy has been inaugurated by the Resettlement Administration, which extends loans to impoverished farm families, in an effort to help them become self-supporting. Regional RA headquarters recently announced.

Under Resettlement policy, each farm family granted a loan agrees to follow approved farm and home management plans worked out by local supervisors, who are trained practical farmers, in cooperation with the county agricultural agent. With this plan, Resettlement makes certain in advance of the utilization of every possible method of making the farm pay and operating the home economically.

At the same time, the client is given the benefit of the farming knowledge of train men and women who are familiar with local conditions, to the end that he may be able to repay his loan. During the crop season the farmer is expected to confer with the supervisor on proper cultivation methods, while his wife is given every assistance in canning, food preservation and other home operations.

At present, State Director Vance E. Swift reports there are approximately 7,000 farm families under care of the rural rehabilitation program in North Carolina. The state has a quota of 15,800 families to be brought under the program by May.

Farm owners, tenants, share-croppers, farm laborers, or persons with farming experience and background are eligible for rehabilitation loans, provided they are the heads of destitute or low income families unable to obtain credit from ordinary sources.

Experience in providing relief for farm families caught in the net of the recent depression led to the conclusion that in the majority of cases it is more practical, more economical and more conducive to good citizenship to help farm families to help themselves by attacking or eliminating some of the causes that make them such easy prey of economic crises.

In every community are to be found farm families which, because of unfortunate circumstances—such as severe illness, poor management, inadequate land resources, lack of training, lack of equipment, exorbitant interest rates and resulting debt and foreclosure—are not financially solvent, but nevertheless are industrious and deserve a chance to prove their worth.

Farm families, judged capable of operating a farm, if given assistance and training, are being extended loans to enable them to purchase tools, livestock, seed, fertilizer, and other things needed on the farm. These families are given up to five years to repay loans for livestock, farm machinery and other heavy equipment. Loans for rent, seed, fertilizer and subsistence are made on a short-term basis of one or two years. Interest on all loans is at 5 per cent, annually.

No family, however, is granted a loan until the expenditure of the money is carefully mapped out and approval given to a farm plan designed to yield sufficient cash income to permit the family to purchase the indispensable needs and to liquidate its debt to the Resettlement Administration. Applications for loans should be made to the county resettlement supervisor or the county agricultural agent.

AUTHORITY SAYS SINK SELFISH WAY IN FARMING NOW

Farmers Who Cooperated Under AAA Should Have Learned Lesson

By GUY A. CARDWELL.

A state of confusion prevails following the Supreme Court Agricultural Adjustment Administration ruling. This is only natural, as the stopping or suspension of this well-organized government agency, which has intimately touched the lives of a large majority of farmers in this country, has left them without the prop upon which they have heavily leaned for the past three years.

Since the sixth of January, I have been asked many times, "What effect will the Supreme Court ruling have on farming generally? What will cotton, tobacco, and peanut farmers do about their 1936 acreage, etc.?" Ignoring the farmers' need for some strong control under existing world conditions and conditions prevailing during recent years, I would say that those farmers who have cooperated with the AAA, either willingly or unwillingly, should have learned something of the value of cooperation; and I think a considerable number of them will "dig in" and continue acreage allotment policies under which they have worked. This is no time for a display of selfishness. Too much is involved. And yet, each individual has the right, under the Constitution, to decide what he is going to plant during the year 1936, and in what acreage. The bars are down.

While the AAA control is "shot," why cannot agricultural leaders in each county—in each community—continue to hold money-crop farmers in line by appealing to their common sense; impressing them with the fact that the success of the whole should be sought—for this is what really matters—not the success of a few individuals. This is not socialism, but common sense.

If acreage control of certain crops was needed during the past three years, and is still needed to prevent overproduction and depression in prices, it seems to me that the farmers will, of their own volition, continue the job started under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

It is my conception that the AAA planned for a living, plus, for American farmers. If this is true, farmers in the southeast have a decided advantage over those in many other parts of the country, for here a man cannot only have a reasonable acreage in southern money crops, but conditions also permit him to make those crops and have that livestock which will provide subsistence for both man and beast.

Let us sink our selfishness and continue working together to improve the economic condition of our worthy family in the community.

Farm owners, tenants, share-croppers, farm laborers, or persons with farming experience and background are eligible for rehabilitation loans, provided they are the heads of destitute or low income families unable to obtain credit from ordinary sources.

Experience in providing relief for farm families caught in the net of the recent depression led to the conclusion that in the majority of cases it is more practical, more economical and more conducive to good citizenship to help farm families to help themselves by attacking or eliminating some of the causes that make them such easy prey of economic crises.

Arrange Garden Plot In Units Or In Sections

In handling the garden plot, much time and effort can be saved by arranging the various crops in units or sections. Two or three sections should be planted to the annual crops, one section to the quick-maturing spring crops such as garden peas, green onions, lettuce, mustard, and spinach, and still another section planted to early cabbage, beets, carrots, and the first planting of snap beans, early corn, and early tomatoes. The main summer crops such as summer cabbage, lima beans, cucumbers, squash, okra, peppers, and sweet corn should also have a section. As soon as one section is harvested, it should be plowed up and prepared for later plantings.

ate of Martin County, North Carolina, this is to notify all persons having claims against the estate of said deceased to exhibit them to the undersigned at his home in Williamston, North Carolina, on or before the 14th day of January, 1936, or this notice will be pleaded in bar of their recovery. All persons indebted to said estate will please make immediate payment.
