Consideration for Others

Senator Bob Reynolds told the truth when he said that if people would visit each other more, wars would diminish, and that knowing people changes our feelings toward them.

If a thousand American citizens should tour the world, they would not find anybody that they would kill nor would they be willing to see any of them killed by others.

It is easy to make nations hate each other if they are taught to hate, which is the first step in the war game. The nature of man—and most beasts—is to tolerate and love rather than to hate. Man has tamed most of the ferocious beasts. They had to have a lengthy association to accomplish setting up a companionship, yet it has proven the truth of the prediction that the lion and the lamb shall lie down together. No race of people will fail to respond to love and mercy and acts of kindness, and when all people deal fairly with them they will soon respond with kindness, yet you can knock down, rob and kill the men of the weaker nations until you kindle the bitterest savagery.

We need to remember that when we begin to impose on strangers that it operates to make them our enemies and brings on war. We cannot claim for ourselves the best of every trade and then expect others to be willing to trade with us.

When we see other people, we will be more willing to tolerate and deal honestly with them.

The Burning Question

Even the untrained political mind has no trouble in understanding that that versatile newspaper writer, Tom Bost, has fully made up his mind who ought to be Governor of North Carolina; and he shoots at all the opponents of Mr. Graham whenever he sees a bush shake in the neighborhood of Winston-Salem or Shelby. He is gunning for McDonald and Clyde Hoey, and he would seem to be expecting to flush them out any minute.

He goes far enough to intimate that the Cleveland County man is trust bound, and almost intimates that McDonald is a very "dangerous" man. He does not point out the danger, however. It may be that the newspaper man has heard the tax-dodgers' language, and it is not only possible but likely that they see the danger.

Of course, both Hoey and MacDonald may be just as Mr. Bost says; but, digging a little deeper into the matter, there is a burning question in the minds of many people and that is: Who are Mr. Graham's political bedfellows?

A Sad Situation

What is a factory worker going to do if he works all of his days at a wage which is so low that he cannot accumulate enough for a home or any estate and then, when he gets old and unable to give 100 per cent service, he is led to the back door and given a kick? The question presents a sad picture, indeed.

Such a worker has only two things left to him: One is starvation; the other is the charity of honest hearts. He can expect no consideration from the mill that refused him any opportunity to have a voice in saying what he might sell his labor for and forced him to take whatever the mill said. Then when he tried to protect himself he was branded "socialist."

A Hot Time in Politics Likely

If the whistling of the political wind is a true indication of the political weather, there is going to be a hot time in the United States from around June 1 until up in November, this year of our Lord, 1936; and if the general public can only hold out, this is one year when the tax-dodging, money-gouging gang is going to get a good flogging.

The only thing that indicates danger ahead is the vast amount of money being spent to influence the thousands who know not.

Business Follows the Advertiser

Greenville Reflector. A survey of 59 principal cities throughout the United States for the past month shows that the biggest business increases have come in the cities where merchants have increased their newspaper advertising. Such figures are evidence to the fact that consistent newspaper advertising is the best method of creating increased business.

Settling Capital-Labor Differences

The Labor-Capital problem would be much easier to solve if they all lived together, where each side would have an opportunity to see and contact each other, teaching them that each has rights and needs alike, and then they would be better able to adjust their differences. As it now is, each knows but one side of the controversy.

Most of our troubles have originated in those factories built and operated in the South which later fell into the hands of New Englanders. The factory demands of a New England owner do not fit well with the Southern worker. New customs and demands, though they may be equally as just as those under which they have worked for years, may not be well understood by the Southern laborer. The owners and workers need to live where they can see each other every day and Sunday, too.

Another source of trouble is a young scion who inherits a fortune and tries to tave over the 1,000 men men employed by his father, who enjoyed the workers' esteem and friendship. The young man, who has probably never earned a dollar and who has always floated along in the higher stratas of society, knowing curs the enmity and hatred of the man who does creases the enmity and hatred of the man who does the work and trouble begins at once.

It is not a new thing in life. Men who think they are imposed upon have never in any period of history been satisfied. We need a more harmonious feeling of actual friendship.

Every poor man should have that feeling of confidence in his employer to think that he would not stand by and see his children starve, and the owner should have won enough of the feeling of loyalty in his employees to think that they would gladly pull him out of a ditch if he should fall in.

Nothing short of a feeling of good honest fellowship will solve the differences between labor and capital.

The World Is Crying for Peace

The world is crying for peace every day, and we are all of one accord in the utterance of peace prayers. That is, excepting the few who do not want peace but war. They are the ones who make money out of war, and when they are making money they do not care anything about the fellow on the battlefield, who is left bleeding, limp, limbless or lifeless. The war profiteers are the fellows who break up peace conferences and prevent our own lawmakers from passing neutrality laws guaranteeing the peace of our own nation. They are, in truth, the devil's arch-angels and the greatest enemy of peace and happiness.

Judge Meekins for President

We have nothing whatever to do with the selection of the Republican nominee for the presidency; but, in the exercise of that guaranteed right of free speech, we take the liberty of saying that of all the candidates proposed we think our own Judge I. M. Meekins is the best yet mentioned. He has the fine quality of friendliness, and he has charity and sympathy for the weak and lowly man. He is, upon the whole, at heart, too good to be a Republican.

Nothing To It

Greenville Reflector. Governor Alf Landon of Kansas, aspirant for the republican nomination as presidential candidate, claims that the New Deal is a "stumbling block" to recovery. A review of the record of the great strides the business of the country has made toward recovery under the New Deal as compared to the downward trend during the last republican administration should be sufficient to convince most anyone that there is nothing to Governor Landon's charge.

They Smite the Hand That Feeds Them

Rocky Mount Herald. The human memory is sometimes fleeting and indeed short.

Who is there among us that does not remember the effects of the great depression that was upon this country from 1929 to 1933? Two-thirds of the high school children in Rocky Mount were underfed, undernourished and the percentage in the grammar grades was higher and the condition that existed in Rocky Mount was practically the same throughout the country. The sad condition is indescribable.

Hungry children crying to destitute fathers for bread. The fathers unable to listen to the cries of their hungry children sought flight through suicide. Infact, we had an epidemic of suicides throughout the country.

The American people ceased to be laughing and smiling people. They carried heavy faces and sad countenances.

When Mr. Roosevelt took the oath of office the above was a true condition. Mr. Roosevelt was the first President of the United States that gave his first concern to help the farmers and try to improve living conditions of labor. He realized that there could be no permanent recovery, unless the agricultural conditions were improved. Agriculture has been improved. The living standards of labor have been bettered and what has come to the farmer and labor has benefited industry and business.

The dividends of the great corporations, many of them the greatest in the history of the nation. No longer ago than yesterday it was published throughout the nation by the General Motors Corporation that they had earned the greatest dividend in the history of the corporation.

Yet many of the major stockholders are crying out Mr. Roosevelt and the Democratic leadership in Congress are ruining the country.

The naked have been clothed, the hungry have been filled and the great stockholders of the great corporations have received their dividends so that they can have their accustomed luxuries which they did not receive during the depression. Yet they cry out against the hand that has made all of this possible.
