Crusading—Then and Now

The Biblical statement that "men flee from their sins because their deeds are evil" is still true.

This was shown in the recent court trial on an injunction secured by William Randolph Hearst against the United States Senate in an endeavor to vacate a Senate order directing the Western Union Telegraph Company to turn over all the Hearst telegrams for the committee's use in investigating Hearst's activity in fraudulent transactions.

The District of Columbia supreme court held that the Senate body is above the nation's courts. The committee immediately got down after the various New Deal enemies, especially the group calling themselves "Liberty Leaguers" and "Crusaders."

The "Crusaders" is an organization composed of a gang whose purpose is far more cruel and oppressive than the Crusaders of the eleventh and twelfth centuries who, claiming to be Christians, were nothing more than murderers and looters seeking to capture Palestine, kill the people and seize their wealth.

Of course, the DuPonts and their allied friends are doing just as bad. They are trying to poison the public mind with the money they made out of war profits; and, if their plans succeed, the hand of darkness will not only choke the American spirit but the world's opportunity as well.

The Liberty League, the Crusaders, the Economy League, the Taxpayers League, and the United States Chamber of Commerce are all one. They are composed of the organized wealth of the country and their sole purpose to try to fool the people by falsifying so that our government will again fall into their greedy hands.

If there has ever been a day in our American history that we needed to be careful to remain free from the greedy and unholy hands of wealth, it is now. The liberty that the Liberty League and Crusaders offer is the same liberty that a lion gives a lamb when he catches it alone in a forest.

Ten Commandments

The 5,000 young women students at Boston University have adopted ten commandments that every school girl in the country should learn and obey, which will save them many blushes, embarrassments and sorrows. In brief, they are:

1. Thou shalt never allow a stranger to take you to your destination.
2. Thou shalt never drink in public.
3. Thou shalt not sit out dances in cars.
4. Thou shalt not be seen with young men who are not careful to obey conventions in society.
5. Thou shalt not use a pet phrase in conversation.
6. Thou shalt use discretion in using slang.
7. Thou shalt not pat or nudge a person when speaking to one, keep your hands to yourself.
8. Thou shalt never go to a man's apartment alone.
9. Thou shalt not indulge in careless affections.
10. Thou shalt not powder your nose on the street.

Optimism

News and Observer.

Speaking at a school meeting held at the University of Pennsylvania last week, Dr. Robert C. Clothier, president of Rutgers University, gave an interesting statement of the functions and duties of the modern teacher. He said:

"It is our responsibility to further catholicity of viewpoint and to end this present provincialism which is a throwback to the Middle Ages; to create a new respect for law and that integrity in government which are the cornerstones of any enduring society; to reestablish the spirit of courage and initiative and self-reliance; to restore straight thinking; to give our people those cultural resources which will enable them to live happily and without deterioration in a world so efficient productively that leisure will be their portion far more abundantly than any earlier generation ever dreamed of; to give them adaptability, the capability to meet new conditions of living and working.

This is what North Carolina expects to get for not more than $864 a year.

Delaware Beats Us

Delaware beats us. They have very few prisoners on hand at any time.

The whipping post does the job. Prisons have become the havens of the lazy sluggards of the country. Many people are not sensible of the sin or shame of crime, so they rush off and commit some felony to get food and shelter at public expense; and just as soon as they are turned out in the cold they again seek to return by committing another crime.

Delaware does things differently. Lawbreakers are tried; if found guilty, the offender is taken out before the public and whipped, a thing all criminals particularly dislike. In the case of a serious crime, they are required to serve a term in prison. There is no state in the union where a man hates to be caught as bad as he does in Delaware, and there is no state with less crime at so low a cost.

North Carolina might do well to adopt the same regulations.

Interest in the Resurrection

Are those saying the world is growing worse stating true facts? Honestly, we do not think so. Certainly, we have to admit that Christianity is having great obstacles to combat, but not enough to stay the force of Christianity. Of course, it moves slowly—like the leaven in the meal—but it moves the more surely by moving slowly.

The force of Christianity appeals to the strength of man, while the forces of satan attacks man in his weakness, when he is least able to withstand the temptations of life.

Williamston people gave proof of their interest in the resurrection and their belief in its power on Sunday, when they crowded the church services of the town, all the churches reporting large attendance. In some of the larger towns of eastern Carolina, the news comes that hundreds were unable to get even standing room at the worship services.

This may mean that the prodigals who have been wandering have grown hungry and are now seeking to return to the father's house, where there is plenty of the things that satisfy, and where there is the love and mercy that make people happy and which abide without ceasing.

If we would banish war and hatred, we will find it only in the way that Christ leads.

Protection for Young Girls

According to the findings of the United States Department of Justice, there are thousands of girls leaving their homes every year who, under promise of good jobs of easy work and good pay, are easy prey for the gangsters. These young women, generally unacquainted with the glittering life of the city, soon find themselves facing loneliness and hunger and, worst of all, friendless, causing thousands to seek a more peaceful and hopeful life down the suicide road, while many others forget the advice given by lonely mothers and compromise with the world of sin and sorrow.

The United States Department of Justice is trying to build a wall of protection for these unfortunate girls, and humanity should back them in their undertaking. There are too many young people being pulled down the road to destruction by designing interests, evil interests.

The Cost Not So Great

Elkin Tribune

It will be remembered that Governor Ehringhaus pointed to $9,000,000 as the approximate cost of North Carolina's 50-50 split on the social security program should the state participate in the Federal plan for old-age pensions and other benefits. The governor used these figures as an effective scarecrow to justify his persistent refusal to call a special session of the legislature to effectuate the proper authorization for this state's participation.

But it seems that the governor, probably unintentionally, was all wet in figuring. According to figures released by the social security board covering the average old-age pension payment in 22 states whose social security plans have been approved, North Carolina's total cost would be around $3,600,000, instead of the Governor's $9,000,000. The average pension in the 22 states amounts to only $19.66 per month.

Governor Ehringhaus estimated that approximately 50,000 persons in this state would be eligible to receive $30 per month, when as a matter of fact the average number in the 22 states is only 10,000. Granting that North Carolina eligibles would number 15,000, the total cost to the state would be approximately $3,600,000.

In this connection Congressman Doughton says: "Regardless of what it costs, it seems to me that the state should not only be willing but anxious to cooperate in this great humanitarian movement when the federal government has said to the state that the state shall be the sole judge of how much to pay and the federal government will match dollar for dollar whatever the state determines to be the proper amount. The social security act does not contemplate doing anything that we should not be doing now, and it is rather humiliating to me to have to admit that we are not doing it now."

Governor Ehringhaus recently made a trip to Washington to try to convince government officials that the state's enabling act would be sufficient authorization for the state to participate, but it does not appear that he was successful.

Verily, it does seem that our governor is determined to have his way in this special session matter. The tobacco farmers, whom he professes a devotion for, stand to suffer because of this, and there are other important matters demanding immediate attention, but the Governor says there is nothing doing.
