Vigorous Tobacco Plants Grown with Peat Moss

Farmers are pleased, generally, with the use of peat moss on tobacco plant beds this winter. Good stands of vigorous plants were secured, they report.

GARDENERS WARNED TO PREPARE FOR ANNUAL WAR ON INSECTS; SEVERAL METHODS SUGGESTED

Mexican Bean Beetles and Flea Beetles Probably Do Most Damage

Good equipment is the first essential in controlling insect pests in the home garden as well as in fields and orchards.

The machine most generally used by home gardeners is a compressed air sprayer of two to three gallons capacity. A hand duster is also desirable, said H. R. Niswonger, extension horticulturist at State College.

The second essential is a supply of good spray and dust material, he added. An 8-ounce glass measuring cup, graduated in thirds and quarters, is useful in measuring materials.

Magnesium arsenate is recommended as a spray for eradicating Mexican bean beetles. One-third cup of arsenate to three gallons of water makes a good solution, Niswonger pointed out. Or dust the beans with a mixture of one pound of magnesium arsenate to three pounds of hydrated lime.

Start dusting or spraying as soon as adult beetles become numerous, and repeat every week or 10 days or as often as necessary. The spray or dust must reach the undersides of the leaves.

Rotenone dust also is a good form of beetle control, he observed, and it is not harmful to human beings. The dust should contain three-fourths of 1 per cent rotenone.

Poisoned Bordeaux powder and rotenone dust are used in controlling flea beetles and cucumber beetles. Make several applications a week apart. The dust may be applied with a sack or a small hand duster.

Flea beetles often cause severe damage to potato, tomato, pepper, and egg plants. The cucumber beetle stunts cucumber and melon plants.

Driver Almost Runs Car Into Police Station Here

D. J. Jones, Elizabeth City man, was arrested for drunken automobile driving here last Saturday evening, when he almost ran over the local police station. Coming up Main Street, the man drove on the sidewalk in front of the station, causing officers of the law to dodge for shelter, it was said. Jones was given a hearing yesterday morning and returned to jail unable to raise the $100 bond required by Mayor Hassell.

Out of a job, and with his tools with him, Jones said yesterday that he was out looking for work. He told officers that he would be glad to get a job and make arrangements to pay the fine and costs.

Decrease Reported in Sale Legal Liquor Last Month

Although warm weather made itself felt, the legal liquor stores in this county had fairly large sales last month, the control board chairman, V. J. Spivey, reporting sales amounting to $7,525.80 during the period. It was a banner month at Jamesville, however, the store there reporting sales of $1,027.55, the fishing season apparently boosting the sales during that time. Oak City and Robersonville had comparatively quiet business, the former reporting $628.25 and the latter $1,706.75 in sales. Williamston, while showing a small decrease, reported sales of $4,109.25.

With dry territory to serve, the stores at Jamesville and Williamston had the edge in the business.

Cull Breeding Birds When Ten to Twelve Weeks Old

Cockerels and pullets to be used as breeders should be selected when the birds are from eight to twelve weeks old. Select only those birds that show good health and high vitality. A broad, deep, well-balanced head, prominent, bright eyes, full breast, and strong straight legs set squarely beneath the body indicate health and vigor. Watch the birds selected all through the growing season and those that lack vigor or are slow in developing should be discarded.

SUNSHINE IS BEST AGENT TO USE IN BLUE MOLD FIGHT

Fungus Cannot Spread or Thrive in Sun's Rays, Expert Says

Sunshine is the best remedy for keeping blue mold out of tobacco plant beds, said Dr. R. F. Poole, plant pathologist at the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station.

The fungus causing this disease, which begun to ravage tobacco beds in eastern North Carolina this season, cannot spread and thrive in the sun's rays, Dr. Poole explained.

Sunshine also is good for the plants, he continued, and helps them build up a strong resistance to blue mold fungi.

The canvas covers on seed beds should be rolled back on warm, sunny days, so the sun can shine directly on the young plants. Replace the canvas late in the afternoon, when the temperature begins to drop.

Light applications of quick-acting nitrogenous fertilizer often hasten the tobacco plants' recovery from blue mold, but care should be taken not to let the nitrogen remain on the plant leaves.

"Be careful," Dr. Poole warned the growers, "not to carry any of the fungus on your hands or clothes from an infected bed to a non-infected bed."

He advised the growers to give their young tobacco plants plenty of sunshine, even if they have not been attacked by blue mold, as sunlight is a good preventative.

After the beds have become infected, he said, they can be saved, but the grower should be extra careful. Do not transplant any of the plants from beds to fields until all traces of blue mold have disappeared.

Spraying for the control of blue mold is not recommended; as far as spray has been discovered thus far that will effectively control the disease.

THE LETTER-BOX

THE MACHINE

I take for my theme "The Machine." I believe the machine is a product of the United States of America. It was in these states early in the eighteenth century that an American first brought into existence that useful and profitable invention which he called a "Machine." There are various kinds of machines. The sewing machine, the elementary machine, the infernal machine. There are hundreds of kinds of machines. The typewriter is called a machine, and the printing press is called a machine. There are many sorts and kinds of machines. The greatest machine that I know of is the political machine. This is a well-oiled octopus built by politicians, and usually turned out at the capital of the state, or some central point. It is a powerful and cogent affair. It extends its ramifications into every nook and corner of the state in which it operates. It makes senators, judges and governors. It glides along with such a serene and subtle smoothness that you are unaware of its presence, progress and power.

This has very correctly been designated as a "machine age." A great big harvesting machine like the one used out in the western wheat fields will do the work of a hundred men, thus making for unemployment. A great big well-greased political machine will corral the votes of a thousand unsuspecting persons.

In a political sense, the machine is all powerful. It brooks no opposition, it acknowledges no adversary. The machine destroys its opponents with the breath from its nostrils and annihilates contending rivalry with its august potency.

The well-oiled machine works with all that is requisite to its nature and kind. The machine, when finished, completed, without blemish or defect, its music is sweet to its devotees, but, lo, it is bitter so-lace to the opposition.

The machine is never idle. It works night and day. Sometimes it is sly, cunning, crafty, sometimes refined, penetrative, revealing keen and delicate distinctions.

The machine is a voter. The machine votes the naive citizen without his knowledge or consent, and it does it in such a cunning way that the foiled citizen is unaware.

Now that a gubernatorial primary is in the offing, I have told my father and uncles, my mother and aunts, to walk wide of the machine unless they be caught into its meshes and voted by the machine against their wishes and interest. The all-powerful cunning, artful machine cares naught for the average citizen except at voting time; then, with its argus-eyes, it can discern you afar, hail you affectionately, and vote you ere you are aware.
