Untrue Statements

This is going to be one year in which many people will have to take back many of their statements, because they have made so many untrue remarks. They are saying things that are entirely untrue in nearly every instance, and the worst of it is that many people know they are lying, but their only idea is to carry their own points at the time, regardless of the method.

This kind of politics often keep the best men from offering their services to the public, while the offices go to many of the "slummiest" fellows of a community who are not fitted for office from any standpoint and who generally draw their crowd of the same ilk to push them through. Even our law-making bodies too frequently contain such men.

We need to be diligent in selecting honest, sensible, capable men to serve us in any capacity.

Cracking the Lash

Is there anyone in politics in North Carolina so common, vile and corrupt that he will stoop so low as to intimidate a humble laborer by threatening the loss of his job unless he votes for the powers in authority?

A few years ago it was the common practice to turn the workers in the Highway Commission from the roads to go out in the service of one particular candidate. This year only a few cases have been spotted where such tactics have been practiced.

In some cases the lash has been cracked. Some employees of private business concerns have been quietly reminded that wages would probably go lower if certain candidates are elected, and some workers in the administration set-up are getting the word that their jobs are dependent upon themselves. Perhaps those workers are not aware that if headquarters should hear of any such threats or intimations the makers would themselves be immediately dismissed. Everyone should remember that he has the guaranteed right to exercise his freedom in his own way, particularly where the ballot is concerned. If he gets a threat or a discharge, he should not fail to report it.

An Opportunity Lost

The nations of the world have lost their opportunity.

At the time when Italy was feeling them all out and pressing for the opportunity to go forward with her Ethiopian campaign, most of the nations, feeling that they were dealing with a civilized country and in a spirit of saving themselves from war and possibly a world disturbance, permitted Mussolini to wage his cruel war, the nations apparently thinking more of their Italian trade relationships than they did of the welfare of the poor, benighted and helpless Ethiopians.

Perhaps the main trouble with the world is that we love trade more than we love our neighbors; we had rather sell bullets for profit than to enjoy peace.

It is good that we do not hate people. On the other hand, it is bad that we are willing to stand by and see the big fish eat the little fish provided we can just get our share of the little fish.

Nobody believes for a moment that Germany's invasion of Belgium was the cause of the World War. It was the knowledge that the Germans were bent on besieging Paris, annexing France, then crossing the channel to seize the British navy and then probably sail west bent on further conquests. That was the reason the allied forces rushed to the aid of Belgium.

No one knows now which country Italy wants to take next. It may be Greece or Switzerland or it may be Palestine and Egypt. Of course, she is counting the cost of a new Roman Empire, and it means much bloody war.

Justice and Politics

The chief Federal detective and leading G-man of the country, J. Edgar Hoover, struck the keynote plumb and square when he said recently that politics is public enemy No. 1. This will be found to be very true whenever an attempt is made to try to enforce the law. The law is required to be enforced by political judges, political lawyers, witnesses who have friends guilty of similar crimes, and jurors, many of whom are in like condition. It is generally hard to mete out justice under such circumstances
