WYNNE - HARRIS

The wedding of Miss Ethel Crawford Harris and Mr. Lamuel Bruce Wynne was solemnized at noon today in the Memorial Baptist church, the Rev. James H. Smith, pastor, officiating. The altar and choir loft of the church were appropriately arranged with ferns and lilies against a background of white. Only members of the immediate families of the participating parties were present for the ceremony. There were no attendants.

Mr. Ben Manning nephew of the groom, was at the organ. After Mendelsohn's wedding march, he played "O Promise Me," and "To a Wild Rose" during the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in a white grosgrain silk suit with matching accessories and wore a shoulder corsage of white rosebuds. The bride and groom entered the church together and were met at the altar by the minister. Immediately following the ceremony, the couple left for West Virginia and Ohio and will be at home, following their return next week, with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Manning on Church Street.

Mrs. Wynne, daughter of Mrs. Myrtle Staton Harris and the late W. S. Harris, is descended from some of the oldest families of this section of the state. She was educated at Oxford College, and for the past several years has been connected with the Branch Banking and Trust Company here. The groom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lamuel Bruce Wynne, whose families were prominent citizens of this county for several generations. He received his A. B. degree at Duke University, and following several years as a teacher in the schools of this county was elected clerk of the Martin County Superior Court.

The following editorial of The Greensboro Daily News appeared in the May 27th issue of the Greensboro Daily News:

ANOTHER LOOK AT KENTUCKY

Another by-product of the Kentucky tax system and fiscal situation which involves repeal of the sales tax, as advocated by Governor "Happy" Chandler in his successful gubernatorial campaign, is the announcement, as learned through the Louisville Courier-Journal, that teachers' salaries in that city will not be paid during June and that this failure will be equivalent to "a 15 per cent reduction from last year's salaries."

The direct cause of this deficiency is attributed to a "lack of funds." A statement of protest, immediately issued by the Louisville Classroom Teachers' Association sets forth, among other things, that "Louisville pays her teachers far below the average set by other cities of similar size and wealth" and that "unfortunately teachers find it necessary to purchase the ordinary necessities of livelihood as do all others."

Yes, we know; the school system is different in Kentucky, as the ad valorem tax obtains and financing of education is a local proposition. That difference is precisely what we're talking about. North Carolina schools are state financed, which increases the responsibility and the amount of funds to be raised by our general assembly, and as such their personnel has been paid regularly and fully. Sure, salaries were cut to the bone; but nevertheless the bone was and is forthcoming on pay day, and the teacher wage scale and operating funds are now definitely and soundly on the upgrade.

There must be in the Louisville development further evidence that the ad valorem, exclusively local, finance plan will not stand up. The teachers' plight is part of the Kentucky system and the fiscal muddle which the Blue Grass state's affairs, ramifying down into the lesser subdivisions of government, find themselves. Governor Chandler and his repeal legislature did nothing towards relieving this situation. The struggle which they have had to secure replacement taxes, with a final resort to high selective commodity levies which extend even to water, is exclusive of provision for the schools and the other state-wide activities which North Carolina has assumed.

Tar Heel citizenry generally will do well to take a look at Kentucky. And no look, with this specific example at hand, should linger longer than that of our teachers.
