For Sale: A Few Democrats

Al Smith has never been able to fool all the people, and he is now just about unable to fool any of them.

He is now trying to head up a bunch of disgruntled hirelings in an effort to defeat Roosevelt. This group is composed of a few fellows who have always wanted to rule everything. They have never been in accord with anything anybody else ever did; they are evidently in close touch with the radical elements of government and have tried to stay close to the money powers. They are not Democrats but self-admitted Republicans, as they threaten to vote that ticket unless all the great bulk of Democrats in this country turn down all of their principles of democracy and kick out Roosevelt. They are not good enough for either the Democrats or the Republicans! Only a bunch of selfish, bigoted traitors, unworthy hirelings who would sell out any principle they might espouse for a trifle of power. And they are speaking now for the vested interests who have found they can neither buy out nor scare out Roosevelt.

Well, let Al Smith, Jim Reed, Bairbridge Colby, Joe Ely and Dan Cohan, vote Republican if they wish. For every one of them no less than 100,000 Republicans will vote for Roosevelt in their stead, and these Republicans have as much honor and patriotism as these five claim to have.

There is no occasion for alarm. There have always been a few Democrats for sale.

The Voice That Directs

The "private executive group" that will direct Landon's campaign for the presidency consist of three old style Republicans, one from Connecticut, the Yankee state, one from the money-god state of New York, and one from the rock-ribbed Republican state of Pennsylvania. It makes no difference who the nominee is nor how the platform reads, the fellows who put up the campaign fund will direct the voting.

New Machinery Causing Trouble

New machinery is causing trouble in the Mayodan mills. The company is installing new machinery to meet competition. The workers complain that the machines will take their jobs and do the work. Although the mill folks say this is not true, of course, it is a patent fact that they buy and pay for high-priced machines for but one purpose, and that is to hire fewer hands and have more machines to work and save money. They claim that nobody will lose a job and no one will get a pay cut. That is argument without reason, for every time a machine is made, it is sold to take the place of not one worker but many—a thing the Mayodan mill people know full well.

Advice To Business Men

Morganton News-Herald.

Bruce Barton, who, it was reported, had been employed by the Republican National Committee to direct its publicity campaign, recently made a speech to the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, during which he told them that business faced a long period of trouble unless it re-established itself in the public regard.

Mr. Barton advised the Illinois business men that the masses of American people have discovered their power and will exercise it, no matter who sits in the White House, that a change of administration will not dissolve all worries, and that business, "must show itself to be more honest than politics, must be more patriotic, more courageous, and more patient."

There is a lot of sense in the words of Mr. Barton. Business leaders, complaining of regulation and regimentation, would have the sympathetic ear of the American people except for the fact that many Americans came to the conclusion, some years ago, that big business was, in part, a racket. Of course, every sensible man knows that there are capable, honest, and patriotic business men, but the failure of these men to stamp out evils in their field of action caused the public to lose confidence.

Whenever the public loses confidence in leaders of business, it will inevitably follow that business is in for a period of punishment. That the innocent suffer with the guilty is a hard truth, but a fact.

As Ordered

Newsdom.

Reading the dispatches of newspaper columnists reporting the Cleveland convention leaves one somewhat bewildered. A composite picture gleaned from these correspondents might run something like this:

A shabbily well-dressed group of sober delegates, somewhat under the weather after a big night, cheerfully sounded the death knell as the Republican party was reborn.

A liberal platform, exuding Old Guard conservatism and reconciling the views of Tories and Communists, was approved by the farmers from the West who admitted taking the bankers from the East into camp and vice versa.

The night was hot and sultry, yet cooling to the favorite sons who affirmed and denied that they had formed a coalition to further the breach in the stop-Landon movement.

In short, a gaily despondent time was had by all.

Don't be foolish and lose your Sox with Al M. Landon and Colonel Knox.

Cows Need Proper Diet To Maintain Necessary Health

Good Pasture Or Hay Of High Quality Furnishes Needed Vitamin A

Cows, like humans, need green leaves in their ration to supply vitamin A and other essentials which are necessary for good health, says Dr. Frank Sherwood, animal nutritionist at the North Carolina Experiment station.

Vitamin A can be supplied best and most economically by a pasture or a good quality hay. Not a bleached, pale-colored one containing a lot of woody stems, says Dr. Sherwood, but a bright green, leafy hay. Too often owners feed their cows almost nothing but cottonseed meal and hulls during the fall and winter months when there is little or no green feed available. Cows fed this almost exclusively often contract a condition which some call "cottonseed meal poisoning."

Dr. Sherwood points out that such a condition might occur to dairy cattle which have been given feeds other than cottonseed meal and hulls, such as peanut meal, linseed oil meal, or soybean meal with a poor roughage.

When afflicted with this condition cows become gaunt and phlegmatic, the hair coat is rough and unkempt, the eyes are cloudy, the milk yield falls off, and that which the cow does give has none of the creamy color of good rich milk. Unless supplied with green feed or some other source of Vitamin A in a short time, the animal gets steadily worse, and may finally contract fits and die.

Given cod liver oil or a good quality of alfalfa hay, cows pick up wonderfully, states Dr. Sherwood. Both cod liver oil and a good hay having a bright green color are rich in Vitamin A while cottonseed meal contains practically none.

Select Seed Irish Potatoes When Crop Is Harvested

Seed potatoes should be selected at harvest time. Go through the field just before general digging and dig separately a large number of hills, keeping the potatoes of each hill to themselves. Select the seed potatoes from those hills having the largest number of uniform tubers that are typical of the variety. Selection of the seed potatoes from the stored crop gives no assurance of good yields nor freedom from disease.

Plants from Treated Beds Live Better, Tests Show

Pitt County demonstrations indicate that tobacco plants from beds treated with peat moss live better and have better root systems than those from beds not so treated.
