County Welfare Worker Writes of Trip to School At Kinston

By MARGARET S. OWENS
Child Welfare Worker
"Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these, my little ones, ye have done it unto me."

Every North Carolina citizen should have the experience the writer had last week. A visit was made to the Caswell Training School at Kinston. This school is designated to take care of the less-than-normal children of the state. There a conglomeration of mentally defective children is seen—idiots, imbeciles and morons.

The institution has 905 acres of land—available space for farming—as dairy, chickens, orchards, gardens, etc. The land is cultivated by the male inmate of the school under supervision. The girls are taught cooking, sewing, laundry work, needlework, etc. Elementary school work is also given. The school is crowded to capacity—the grounds outside and the buildings inside present an immaculate appearance. The personnel is composed of a trained, sympathetic group of men and women. There are children of all ages, kinds, and descriptions—children of the wealthy and children of the poverty-stricken. When one sees such a mass of under-privileged children they are inclined to exclaim "So unfortunate." Yes; but North Carolina has not failed to provide for them—to segregate them from society and give them a chance to enjoy as much of a normal life as it is possible. In spite of the apparent hopelessness of the group, the writer conversed with several of the inmates. They seemed to enjoy the tasks laid down for them to perform and were busy as bees carrying on the duties necessary to operate such a huge institution.

An addition is under construction, consisting of an auditorium and several buildings for housing quarters. This addition will help to take care of a part of the 700 children now on the waiting list of the school. The tragic part of the story is that many will have to wait until larger quarters can be added. It means that many of Martin County's children who need such care now will have to wait until there is available room for them. There is one service that the school is able to render and is rendering now—that is the service of the trained psychologist on the staff. This enables the social workers over the state to have children take mental tests; the result of which enables the worker to be wiser in planning for the welfare of children.

Whatever the future of social work in the state may be, we may rest assured that North Carolina will take care of her underprivileged children.

Magnolia Project Given Approval

Washington, June 23.—Representative Lindsay C. Warren today had a lengthy conference with Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Administrator of the Resettlement Administration, about the great Magnolia resettlement project now being proposed in the counties of Washington and Tyrrell. Dr. Tugwell recently returned from a visit to the locality and today assured Mr. Warren that it would become an accomplished fact. He said the only question now open was the size of the project, and that it had already been determined to move in at least 600 resettlement families. Dr. Tugwell informed Mr. Warren that he had discussed the entire project with the President. For a long time Mr. Warren has been impressing upon officials the suitability of this locality for such a project, and he was much pleased today over the enthusiasm of Dr. Tugwell and his determination to see it through.

McDonald Heard by Big Gathering Here

when he took the sales tax off certain necessities of life, "fat belly, molasses and turnip greens"—to quote him—and spend six million for old-age pensions and better schools. "Hoey has not said where he would get the money, but he has said he would not get it from the wealth," McDonald charged, and then predicted if Hoey is made gov.

error of North Carolina we will have another state tax on land. "I have said where I could get the money, and the Wall Street Journal, a New York financial paper, bears me out that the sales tax can be eliminated and the revenue raised from wealth without running corporations out of the state. Hoey's stand on the liquor question is just more hoey, Dr. McDonald stating that if he had his way he would blot out liquor, but since he can't he would favor county control over state control. "I do not want a state liquor board in Raleigh to help me elect my successors," he said in charging that the set-up as it is now is rotten enough. In conclusion, the speaker said, "We are facing one issue: Do we want four more years of domination by the tobacco and power companies through Agent Hoey? If we do, then vote for Hoey. But if I am made governor, I will enter Raleigh in January with my sleeves rolled up and clean out that gang."
