Where the Big Trades Are Made

There seems to be one thing that nobody ever gets above—and that is the Congressional pork barrel. Some of us may seem to get above the pork itself, but we still do not get too proud to hang around the old barrel—whether you call it the swill tub, the trough, or any other name you may choose for it. There is always a flock around it, and there is no complaint about whatever you call it.

And the Congressional-pork barrel is where the big trades are made, mostly for office.

The Wrong Way

Law enforcement officers have so often failed in Columbus County that a number of the best people of the county have banded themselves together to try to right things—although it is in the wrong way.

They are working on the premise that they never make a mistake, and they do not give the other fellow the right of a hearing, which is in itself a very dangerous proceeding. It gives both good and bad men the right to band themselves together for the purpose of making others see things just as they do.

There is nothing better in the whole plan of law enforcement than our present method of trial in open court, where each side is given a fair opportunity to prove his or her or their contentions.

However, it is sometimes hard to get justice done in the courts. The lawbreaker always has the advantage in our courts, more because we have had men for witnesses and jurors than from any other cause. Our best way to go about correcting things is not to band ourselves together to execute the law but to stand together to see the law executed.

Democracy Unanimous

Baseball suffered greatly last week and the week before as a conversational topic, chiefly because of the Democratic convention. The entire country has been looking forward to the time when it might celebrate another great Roosevelt Day. Not in a hundred years has a presidential candidate been nominated on the Democratic ticket without a single dissenting ballot. It is truly marvelous that a man who has been President for four years can command the unanimous support of any convention for a new term. This single fact alone shows that he is of the highest type of leader.

Of course, we know there are those who are bitterly opposed to him and who, in a former day, would have fought him; but democracy has now so established itself in the minds and hearts of the people that they are unwilling to listen to that type of politicians, who simply want to dominate the earth for their own selfish interests, and unless all signs change, Franklin D. Roosevelt is going to sweep the country by a majority unknown before in American history.

New Peanut Statistic Law

Suffolk News-Herald

President Roosevelt yesterday signed into law the new measure providing for the publication of statistics on peanuts in the raw state. The law will operate similarly to that controlling cotton which requires ginners to report the number of bales ginned and ware houses and others the amount of cotton stored or on hand.

We have not seen a copy of the peanut statistics law, but it probably provides for operators of picking machines to report the number of bags picked. After the nuts are marketed, millers, warehousemen, and all persons or firms buying or storing the raw product will be required to report to the agricultural department periodically.

If the statistics law works well with cotton factors we see no reason why it should not be as helpful to the peanut industry. It seems to us that it will reduce opportunities for speculation and have a stabilizing effect upon the market.

It should be a protection to millers and to processors. The carry-over known, it should have effect of governing production and thereby prevent surpluses. Shellers and cleaners would be able to take full advantage of the law of supply and demand which regulates prices. Producers would be protected as well through this same knowledge.

It seems to us that this law places the peanut industry on a higher plane than ever before in its history. No one will ever again be taking a leap in the dark so far as the actual supply of peanuts on hand is concerned. It will reduce, if not eliminate, the gamble.

Egg Production Is Lower This Year

Egg production in North Carolina will be below normal this summer, and unless good care is given the flocks, the eggs will be of inferior quality.

To make the most of high summer prices, said Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at State College, poultrymen will need to take special pains with their flocks and eggs.

The first step, he said, is to produce infertile eggs, as they are better for immediate consumption and they also will keep in good condition for a longer period than fertile eggs.

Keep the nests clean, he added, so the eggs will not have to be cleaned before marketing. Eggs not to be consumed immediately should not be washed, as washing removes from the shells a protective substance that is needed to prevent rapid deterioration.

In hot weather, eggs should be collected several times a day and stored immediately in a cool, moist place where there is plenty of ventilation. A spring house or cellar is an ideal place.

Air in the storage room should be free from strong odors, as eggs readily absorb such odors from the atmosphere.

Candle eggs, especially in summer, to keep inferior ones off the market. Good prices can be commanded only by poultrymen who maintain a reputation for selling good eggs.

Deliveries should be made more frequently in summer than in winter, as this is necessary to supply the trade with strictly fresh eggs.

To bring high prices, eggs must look good. Customers demanding high quality eggs will not pay top prices for small, dirty, or cracked eggs, Dearstyne warned.
