Where the Opposition Lies

Why are some people so opposed to the New Deal? Only recently, a gentleman from a near-by county was standing around a small group and having a lot to say against the New Deal—just "cussing" it out in general. It was suggested to him that he was having a mighty lot to say against the New Deal; he responded that he was not—that he was going to have even more to say. Whereupon, one of the gentlemen in the crowd asked him if it was not a fact that all of his holdings in that county were sold for debts which he could not pay under the old deal; and that, since the advent of the New Deal, he had become able to buy it all back? Thereupon the New Deal critic hung his head and walked away.

The main critics of the New Deal have practically all profited materially under its benefits, and they have no legitimate excuse for criticizing it. Their only reason is because a few of the very rich feel their power to dominate the business of the world slipping, and they began a fight on it, with every little pop-in-jay following suit.

Everybody knows that 99 people out of every 100 have prospered more under the New Deal than they did under the old. It behooves us all to reelect President Roosevelt and continue the benefits of the New Deal.

Praise for Nobles

Dr. M. C. S. Nobles, jr., of the State Department of Revenue, has sent in his resignation, which has been accepted by the governor, who, in his acceptance, paid a glowing tribute to Nobles.

It seems that Nobles gets the praise, while Maxwell gets the offices. It must be that Maxwell is the man of political power, and they need a politician worse than they do a business man.

Work and Play

Most of the schools and colleges are opening up their athletic activities, but, so far as we know, nothing has been done toward getting students in condition to take up the studies of reading, writing and arithmetic in advance of the regular opening. Of course, these things may be taken up later, and it is even possible that time may be found to sandwich in a little geography and grammar, but no foreign languages and very little science. It must be "ball," even if it results in a few broken legs and arms.

Our people seem to be fast swinging out of line. We could not possibly take a shorter course toward the field of ignorance than that which we are now pursuing. And we are doing all this at an enormous cost, which is a blow at our civilization.

We, of course, need some play, but it should be subordinate to work.

Out of the Profit

Nashville Graphic

Every year during the tobacco season, when farmers are handling more money than at any other time, stories reach the newspapers frequently relating robberies, swindlings and careless losses. Another tobacco season is now in progress and the tobacco grower will receive his year's earnings.

The same sharks and the same petty swindlers will be at work again this season, as they have in the past and as they will continue to do in the future. Now is the time for folks to profit by the experience of past years and take no chances on losing any part of their hard-earned money.

On Going After Things

Chowan Herald

Take our neighborly neighbor, Williamston. It's up and doing all the time, and someone is on the job 24 hours every day. Nothing is talked of or proposed in this section of the hemisphere but that it seems to get an impetus first in Williamston. It grabs off everything—why even yesterday one reads a couple of its trade board citizens were in Raleigh and stole a march on all of eastern North Carolina by having their town designated as one of the five State towns for sending out highway patrol radio information. Just a little evidence of activity. Williamston moved. Edenton read about it afterward.

Frankly, progress means doing something. A chance for a hosiery mill here has been bruited about for some time. Nothing has been done to land it. Williamston or even Swan Quarter may get it. The proposal to put a big wood pulp paper manufactory into eastern North Carolina has been in the air for several months. Not a move by Edenton or Chowan to pull off this $2,000,000 plant, Plymouth, sleepy little Plymouth across the bay is after it. We're not. And why not, this and a hundred other things.

Let's get away from the fear of another "Edenton is a peanut town, and we could smell it before we could see it." Let's not lay back on the oars because a sound bridge is coming toward us soon, but, at that, far away from us. Let's at least start driving now to draw in this forthcoming bridge traffic instead of letting it slip gaily by through Yeopim and Bethel into Hertford and Elizabeth City.

Where are you, Business Men's Association? Awake and be the captain of your soul, the master of your fate. Do something, even if it is to have another banquet. Selah.
