

Feature Ocean Highway In Special Newspaper Section

The Ocean Highway, linking Maine and Florida, will be featured in a special section of the New York Times within the near future, according to Jno. E. Talmadge, representative of the paper, who was here gathering data a few days ago. The Ocean Highway, the shortest and most attractive route connecting North and South, will be the main feature of the paper's special section but favorable mention will be made of the towns along the route, including Williamston, it was said.

District P-T. A. Meeting Held In Kinston Recently

Among those attending the district parent-teacher meeting held in Kinston last week were Mrs. J. F. Thigpen, president of the local organization; Mrs. Carlyle Langley, Mrs. J. A. Ward, Mrs. E. H. Wagner, Mrs. L. W. Anderson, Mrs. W. E. Old and Mrs. Kenneth Lindsley.

There were several leaders of note present at the meeting, and those attending from here were much impressed by the spirit of those who are so interested in this worthy organization. The keynote or main objective of the parent-teacher group was stressed by every speaker. It is to engender a spirit of cooperation between teachers and parents for the best interests of the child, putting that ahead of individual objectives such as raising funds for specific purposes. Finances are not supposed to be mentioned in the meetings, they were told, and the local organization under the able leader hopes to get more real good out of this year's work than ever before. All parents, both mothers and fathers, and all teachers are asked to attend all meetings.

No Prayer Meeting at the Baptist Church Wednesday

Rev. J. H. Smith, pastor, announces there will be no prayer meeting service held in the Baptist church tomorrow evening, the minister explaining that the service had been called off that members of the congregation may worship with the Methodists in their special week of services.

Rev. W. L. Clegg, Bethel minister, is conducting the meeting in the Methodist church, and services are being held each evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Virginia Farm Body Outlines Plans For Stabilization of Price

Working through their Farm Bureau Federation, Virginia peanut growers are busy planning for a profitable season this year, according to the South Side Virginia News.

A government-controlled storage program, instead of the oil-diversion program, as a means of stabilizing peanut prices was recommended to Secretary Wallace a few days ago by the peanut committee of the Virginia farm organization.

The proposal is for "insurance against too-low and too high prices, with the ultimate aim of stabilized price on farmers stock peanuts approaching the parity price as closely as practical, which will afford the peanut farmer the living to which he is entitled."

The recommendations made by the neighboring state farmers are: "After careful study and consideration of the present peanut situation and in light of many years of experience with the peanut industry, we, the peanut committee of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation do respectfully request the careful consideration and recommended adoption of a peanut control plan embodying the following points:

1. Controlled supply of peanuts going into edible channels of trade by a government-controlled storage program instead of the oil diversion program.

2. Determination of the production from peanut picker reports, which is the only source for authentic information, as quickly as possible after each harvesting season.

3. After getting the production from peanut picker reports, the determination by the proper official or committee of what per cent of the total crop should be stored under a properly controlled plan. "4. Only farmers cooperating with the soil conservation program to be allowed to participate in this storage program.

"5. The establishment of a very strong commodity loan on the peanuts in controlled storage.

"6. A controlled and systematic marketing of the stored peanuts late in the year, just prior to harvesting of next crop, only in case the price equals or is higher than the price determined by the proper official or committee, below which these peanuts cannot go into channels of edible trade.

"7. The crushing into oil of any unsold portion of the said stored peanuts only after the following year's crop has been harvested, official production figures form peanut picker reports made available and the declaration by the proper officials that the new crop is ample to prevent any shortage before the next harvest season.

"In regard to points three and four we wish to state that should it be determined that 85 percent of a certain crop will be sufficient for the edible channels of trade, leaving a surplus of 15 percent, then 20 to 25 percent of the crop should be put in controlled storage in order to be certain of preventing a depressed market due to any surplus. It can be carefully estimated from the 1934 and 1935 peanut contracts and the 1936 soil conservation compliance just what percent of the crop is represented by growers cooperating with the soil conservation program. It can be then determined what percent of the crops grown by cooperators must be stored in order to give the desired percent of the total crop; e. g., in order to store 20 percent of the total crop, it might take 30 percent of the crop grown by cooperators with the soil conservation program.

"In regard to points five, six and seven, we wish to state that the loan figure must be as high as the minimum price set for the stored peanuts and that a crushing payment be figured on the surplus that will guarantee the cooperating producer just a little more for his stored peanuts than he received for the rest of his crop."

The statement concludes with the assurance that the committee and the Federation stand ready to cooperate with the Secretary to the limit "on developing and establishing a peanut program so necessary for the welfare of the peanut growers."

Rehabilitation Loan Helps Farmers Get New Start In Life

Beaufort County Farmer Is Now "Getting on Top Again"

Belhaven.—Declaring that he and his family were "actually cold and hungry" when he applied for rehabilitation aid, E. L. Swindell, a client of the Resettlement Administration living near here, is now "getting on top again."

His appreciation of the help he received is expressed in a letter to Miss Margaret E. Jones, home supervisor for the RA, at Washington.

"I was without work and could not get anything to do," Swindell stated. "Although I always before had had a good job, I was forced to apply for relief as we were actually cold and hungry. I was put under rural rehabilitation and with their help I am getting on top again."

The rehabilitation loan he received.

ed went for seed, fertilizer, and feed and enabled him to put in a crop, buy implements and improve his livestock.

"We now have a cow, chickens, pigs and a nice supply of canned fruit and vegetables. I have been able to ditch by farm and build a small barn to hold this year's harvest and to repair my out-buildings. I have also bought material to cover my house. I have repaid my loan in full both last year and this year.

"Resettlement helped me in several ways. It financed me when I could not finance myself. It gave me confidence in myself. It came to my rescue when the future looked very dark. It helped me become self-supporting. It has been a great help in my community.
