The Fence or the Ambulance?

'Twas a dangerous cliff, as they freely confessed, Though to walk near its crest was so pleasant, But over its terrible edge there had slipped A Duke and full many a peasant. So the people said something would have to be done. But their projects did not at all tally, Some said, "Put a fence 'round the edge of the cliff," Some, "An ambulance down in the valley." But the cry for the ambulance carried the day. For it spread through the neighborhood city, For it may be useful or not, it is true, But each heart was brimfull of pity For those who slipped over the dangerous cliff; And the dwellers in highway and valley Gave pound or gave pence, not to put a fence, But an ambulance down in the valley. "For the cliff is all right if you're careful," they said, "And if folks ever slip or are dropping, It isn't the slipping that hurts them so much As the shock down below when they're stopping." Then an old sage remarked, "It's a marvel to me That people give far more attention To repairing results than to stopping the cause. When they'd much better aim at prevention. "Let us stop at its source all this mischief," cried he, "Come, neighbors and friends, let us rally; If the cliff we will fence we might almost dispense With the ambulance down in the valley." "Oh, he's a fanatic," the others rejoined, "Dispense with the ambulance? Never! We'd dispense with all charities, too, if he could. But no! We'll protect them forever; Aren't we minding folks up just as fast as they fall? And shall this man dictate to us? Shall he? Why should people of sense stop to put up a fence, While their ambulance works in the valley?" But a sensible few who were practical, too, Will not bear with such nonsense much longer. They believe that prevention is better than cure, And their party will soon be the stronger. Encourage them, then, with your purse, voice and pen, And (while other philanthropists dally) They will scorn all pretense and put up a stout fence On the cliff that hangs over the valley. -Author Unknown.

Blames Woman for Capture on Charge Killing 14 Years Ago

Negro Brought Back From Philadelphia Offers Advice

"If you don't ever want to get your neck broke, tell a woman nothing," Oliver Grimes, 44-year-old colored man, said this week behind the bars in the Martin County jail, where he is awaiting trial in the March court for the murder of Richard Smith in the upper part of the county 14 years ago. Grimes explained that he told his common-law wife in Philadelphia what he had done down in Martin County, that everything was all right after that until they quarreled. He slapped her and she turned him over to the Philadelphia police. "And if you do tell a woman something, don't ever quarrel with her after that," Grimes added. Fleeing from justice 14 years ago, Grimes left his wife and from that time until now he has heard nothing from her. He does not know whether she is dead or alive, married again, or where she is. "I certainly would like to see her, but I can't blame her if she does not come to see me and help me now," Grimes said. The 44-year-old negro, a native of Pitt County, talked about the recent depression in Philadelphia, pointing out that it was "plenty bad" there for a while, but that conditions had improved considerably. Grimes did not talk much about the killing of Smith in a crap game near Oak City, and did not appear at all worried as he saton his bunk in the jail with a fellow prisoner, nonchalantly smoking a cigarette and playing some game of cards.

BOUNDARY DISPUTE SETTLED IN FAVOR OF MARTIN COUNTY

W. J. Jackson, W. C. Manning and Thomas Green, still stands and is recognized as the eastern terminus between Beaufort and Martin Counties.

The line between the eastern and western termini was determined as follows by the commission: "It begins at the head of Welch's Creek and runs a straight line to a large cypress in the old J. and W. tract; thence a straight line to the point on the Jamesville Road at which the State Highway Commission has erected a marker." The center of the controversy was between the marker on Welch's Creek and the big cypress in the dismal, and there was no dispute over the line from that point on the Jamesville-Washington road back to the western terminus from which point the line follows a straight course to the Thoroughfare Road where the highway commission has another marker; thence a straight line from there to another marker; then to another marker near the E. T. Hodges corner; thence to the Washington-Williamston highway No. 17; thence a straight course to a point leading from Batts Cross Roads towards Tranters' Creek; thence on through J. A. Britton's front yard, leaving the Britton home in Beaufort County, to a stump in Taylor's Lane; thence to a stump in the road just in front of Geo. Hoel's residence, and then a straight line to Bear Grass or Turkey Swamp, the western terminus. All connections are by straight lines. The commission makes provisions to protect any deeds recorded or taxes paid in the wrong county, and recommends the appointment of engineers to erect suitable markers to the end that all future controversies as to the location of the line may be obviated and avoided. The commission also recommends that a bill be drafted and agreed upon by the proper representatives of the two counties, and introduced in the General Assembly at the session of 1937 as early as possible. Attention is being given the drafting of such a bill, but it has not been introduced in the legislature so far, it was learned this week.
