

Quietness Marks Parmele Front In Past Few Days

"Tall Story Club" Is Formed to Commemorate George's Birthday

There is no news in Parmele this week. Little Gean Cargile has recovered from her sickness. Little Charles Wildman is doing nicely with his burns. The sun is shining and lots of gardening and smiling.

Next week will be February 22 when we celebrate for the father of our country. And since there is so little news I might just tell you how we celebrated once in the good old days of long ago. We called it "George Birthington's Wash-day," and since George never told a lie we passed around slips of paper to see which one could write the biggest one.

The first one wrote: "My children are all very fond of castor oil."

Of course that is easy to believe. The next one wrote: "I saw a humming bird fly across the ocean with an elephant in his bill."

Just suppose he had dropped it? The next one wrote: "I was walking in the country and in passing a farm house a big fierce bull dog came out after me. He meant business and I was helpless, so I just rolled up my sleeve and rammed my fist way down his throat and pulled a hand full till I pulled and turned the bull dog clean wrong side out. And when I pulled his tail out where his mouth had been he went running off in the other direction and that bull dog was a collie."

Collie are better.

The next one wrote: "I saw five men floating up the river on a big flat rock. One was deaf, one was blind, one had no arms, one had no legs and one had no clothes on. The deaf man said I hear a duck. The blind man said, 'There it is. I see it. The man with no arms picked up a gun and shot it. The man with no legs ran and got it. He brought it to the man with no

Mrs. Carson and Twin Sons Are Attending Same College

Buies Creek — From Parmele, N. C., there came to Campbell College this year a mother and her 16-year-old twin sons to enter the college department. The mother, Mrs. Lula Carson, is taking a one-year secretarial course, and the boys, Cecil and Theodore, entered as college freshmen, in preparation for a course in electrical engineering at State College. All three of them are doing self-help work to help defray the expenses of their education, the boys helping sweep the grade building and Mrs. Carson keeping study halls.

Mrs. Carson never had a college education, because, being an orphan, it was necessary that she try to earn a livelihood as early as possible after she finished high school. After she attended a summer school, E. C. T. C., stood the examination, and got a first grade certificate, she taught schools for two years. "This was long enough to prove to me that teaching was not my vocation," she said. During the war she did office work, as most of the boys were in France, and it was easy to secure work without training. "I have always felt since then that this was what I wanted to do," she said.

"The death of my husband left me three years ago with little besides some insurance. I think it is my duty to help my boys get an education and this is the only way I can see. I think with what assistance I can give the boys through my secretarial work, that with their working, they can get a college education. It may take them more than four years, but they can do it."

"And I have not been disappointed in the place, we are all delighted with it," she explained, smiling.

Another Carload FINE MULES

It is time to begin farming and to meet the demands of this section we secured another fine car load of mules this week. They are young and well-broken and we can supply you with most any size or weight mules you could desire.

We guarantee our mules to be just as represented. We carry nothing but the best grade of mules and our prices are very reasonable when you take into consideration the grade of mules we carry.

CONTROL SUPPORT

While many Martin County farmers are not entirely satisfied with the new edition of the farm bill, they are certain that it offers far greater promise than no bill at all, and they will give it a strong support when time comes to vote. Such is the opinion expressed by representative farmers of the county.

"It is better to accept a reduction program now before spending a lot of money making a crop and offering it at less than cost next fall," one farmer reasoned.

Agricultural authorities are now working rapidly setting up machinery for a tobacco referendum, but no date for voting has been mentioned so far.

clothes on and he put it in his pocket.

I never knew rocks could float.

The next one wrote: I killed a cat. But cats have nine lives, and the cat was back in the kitchen that night as young as ever. So I tied a brick to his neck and dropped him in a barrel of water. He drank up all the water and that night he was sitting in the bottom of the barrel whining for a drink. So I took him out and chopped his head off and threw it out in the back of the garden. That night he came in and brought his head in his mouth.

Sounds kinder spooky.

The next one wrote: My grandfather had a mule. Old Pete was a wonderful mule. One day he got in the back woods lot to the still where we made brandy and he ate so much mash and drank so much beer that he got real beastly drunk. He came stumbling and staggering up towards the house and when he got near he fell down dead drunk. Grandpa said, "Boys old Pete is dead. Come on and skin him and save the hide." So we skinned him and rolled up the hide and sent it to town. Then we went and dressed six sheep for the market. Just about the time we finished the sheep old Pete waked up and got up and came on up to the house. Grandpa said he would sure freeze to death as it was only ten above zero. So we covered him with sheep skins and fitted and tied them good and close around him. The sheep skins grew to him and after that we sheered forty pounds of fine wool from old Pete every year for twenty years.

In Five Years He'll Own His Own Shop. We Know!

HE'S SAVING FOR THE FUTURE

This cheery young chap is an example of what "to save and advance" stands for. At twelve he was delivering groceries, during high school he worked after school and on Saturdays, when he graduated he became the boss' best selling clerk. During all these steps of advancement he has saved to reach his goal . . . to own his own store!

In five more years he will own his own store . . . but will you have reached your goal? Will you have the home you've been planning on, or whatever else you've always wanted? You most likely will if you've saved a certain amount each week or month. However, if you haven't saved it's never too late to start. We welcome small or large accounts and investments alike.
