State College Saves Money By Work Of Its Students. Students working in the State College woodshop saved the college between $3,000 and $4,000 in furniture bills during the last fiscal year. Instructor Macon R. Rowland announced recently. This summer they have produced 130 sturdy maple chifferobes which will be placed in dormitory rooms. Including 360 similar pieces of furniture constructed last summer, the students have made enough units to place one in each dormitory room on the campus. Estimating the regular retail price at $22.50, Mr. Rowland said construction of the chifferobes at the college saved about $5 on each unit. In addition, savings were effected in the production of other furniture and heavy equipment for the laboratories.

Promote Safety In Elementary Grades Shows Better Cotton In Joint Undertaking

Raleigh — A detailed program designed especially to instill safety consciousness in the minds of elementary grade children has been completed by a group of teachers attending the State College summer session. The "Safety Unit" provides comprehensive methods for teaching younger children the responsibility for their own safety and the rights of others. Especially emphasized is the connection between safety and good citizenship. A copy of the study outline was filed today with the State Department of Public Instruction, which will keep it available for teachers desiring to examine the plan for possible ideas in teaching safety. Mrs. Bill Pleasant Flythe of Jackson, originated the unit, which was enthusiastically accepted by other teachers in the industrial arts class instructed by Miss Lila Bell of Raleigh. The program embraces scores of devices by which young minds can be impressed vividly with the importance of protecting themselves from everyday hazards and particularly motor vehicles. In connection with the unit, the teachers constructed an exhibit containing a model village in which traffic hazards could be interestingly interpreted to children. They also built a small puppet theatre and wrote a play to emphasize safety in an entertaining manner. Each of the 17 teachers working on the unit intends to adapt it to her classes when the public schools reopen. They are hopeful that other teachers will become interested in the plan, which has been encouraged by the State Division of Highway Safety.

When To Cut Lespedeza To Make The Best Hay. Lespedeza should be cut when it attains a height of 15 inches or when it is in full bloom, whichever occurs first. The usual dates for the Korean variety is from August 1 to September 1 and fifteen days later for the other varieties. When July and August are dry and September wet, the main growth of the Common, Tennessee 76 and Kobe varieties will take place in September and it will pay to delay cutting until October 1 or later. If cut early, however, lespedeza will make enough second growth to reseed the land but it is seldom possible to remove both a hay crop and a seed crop the same year.
