this county, Gupton has hardly scratched the surface in lowering the feline count. More than 1,613 cats have been taken out of this and neighboring counties during the past six or eight months.

Wounded in the World War, Gupton turned to the unusual profession for a livelihood. This morning had 55 cents in cash and a load of cats to show for his six months' work "But I have managed to live and get along," he said. Finding the peoquite considerate and friendly. Gupton declared that he had enjoyed his work in this county, and is hopeful that he can get another contract which will permit him to return next year.

banks of the historic Roanoke. Just what Mr. Thomas had to say, the listeners are not quite agreed, but it was definitely pointed out that in his conversa tion with Kay Kayser he said that one of the happenings in Dixie impressing him most during a recent visit was a tobacco sale on the Williamston market. A sale followed in the studio, but the local color was missing.

Mr. Thomas described Farmer Louis Roberson and had other in teresting comment to offer about the market and the selling methnut ods. He never did say that he understood the auctioneer.

Many Northern visitors, cluding quite a few notables, are seen on the local market from day to day during the sell-ing season. But they come and go virtually unnoticed.

Hardison was without opposition on the printed ballot, but the names of three other persons were volun tarily written in by eight voters. Clarence Wallace polled six votes. James Long I, and A. Corey In Williamston Township, Charles Moore polled 474 votes for con stable, the number one precinct giv ing him 290 votes and the number two precinct, 184. He was without opposition. Official returns, tabulated by precincts below, tell the story of how Martin County Democrats joined with fellow party members throughout the nation to record one of the greatest Democratic victories in the annals of political history. Martin voters, polling approximately 4,758 votes or just about 650 short of the entire voting strength, broke all previous records when they topped the 1936 vote count by more than 150. Democracy was never given a greater support than it received at the thirteen polling places in this county last Saturday. The county was unanimous in several precincts, the opposition showing little strength in all the others. The third term issue, or no other issue, had no bearing whatever on the size of the vote cast for Mr. Roosevelt. He led the ticket with 4,625 votes against a low of 106 for Mr. Willkie on the national ballot. Giving the President a stirring vote of confidence, the Democratic electors extended their support to all the others will as for warding the vote for constable in Jamesville and Williamston Townships is not included in the vote below, but all other contests are listed, the Democratic nominees holding first column positions under the respective contests, as follows:
