

Farmers Told How Government Will To Reduce Bad Eggs Build 20 Chapels

A bad egg is just a good egg gone wrong, says T. T. Brown, extension poultry specialist of N. C. State College, "but when 175 million dozen eggs go bad—as they do each year in the United States—that's something to worry about," he added.

Brown said that the way to prevent this tremendous egg loss is to follow good production methods on the farm and good methods of handling eggs from the nest to the consumer. The poultryman gives some suggestions on how producers can handle their flocks and eggs to help cut down this loss, and save food for defense.

Fort Bragg—Contracts for the construction of 64 mobilization type buildings and 20 regimental chapels at Fort Bragg have been awarded the V. P. Loftis Company, of Charlotte, who submitted a bid of $780,000 for this lump sum construction, according to an announcement by Lt. Col. Lawrence L. Simpson, constructing quartermaster, this morning.

Work will begin immediately and the completion date is October 10th.

To be constructed under this authorization are 14 standard 63 man barracks, a 170 man mess hall, two theatres, a service club, officers and nurses mess hall, hospital quarters, officers recreational building, one induction building, one administration building and other quarters and recreational facilities. Also included in this authorization are 18 motor repair shops, 13 gasoline stations and 6 storehouses.

The 20 chapels, each seating 362 men and each with pipe organ, represent Fort Bragg's share in the Army's 550 unit church construction program throughout the country. Five of these chapels will be located in the Ninth Division at Fort Bragg. Five for white troops and one for colored troops will be placed in the Field Artillery Replacement Training Center, and the others will be placed in various other areas on the Post.

Two Trials Got North Carolina into The Union; Likewise, It Took Two To Get Her Out.

The inhabitants of North Carolina have been recognized since the day of the earliest settlements as a democratic, liberty-loving, and conservative people. They have been slow to act, but usually they stand behind their acts with all their strength and integrity.

When the Constitution was referred to the thirteen independent sovereignties for adoption, the Old North State hesitated until after 11 had ratified and Washington had been elected President. In addition to North Carolina, Rhode Island was the other colony of the original thirteen that had not joined the Union when our national government was first inaugurated in 1789.

Having won independence of England many inhabitants of North Carolina opposed the idea of surrendering their liberty to a federal government. Led by Willie Jones, of Halifax, this faction feared the power of a strong central government unless a "Bill of Rights" were added to safeguard personal liberty.

In Hillsboro the convention met to consider ratification. Jones announced that his followers were in the majority and opposed adoption. He asked that the vote be taken so that they could defeat the Constitution and go home. When urged by such leaders as Davie, Willie Jones agreed to listen to a discussion of the matter. His followers remained in session, all features of the document were debated, and then outvoted his opponents 184 to 84.

More than a year passed before the state tried a second time to get into the Union. On this occasion, in Fayetteville, November 16, 1789, North Carolina passed an ordinance joining the Union.

Seventy years passed before the Old North State took steps that led in the direction of secessions. Many things had happened before North Carolina tried to get out of the Union. On the 28th of February, 1861, the voters rejected the proposed convention which would have authority to act on the question of seceding and joining the Confederacy.

April was a month of action. On the 12th Fort Sumter was fired on. The next day it surrendered. Sunday, the 14th, was quiet, but on Monday Lincoln called for 75,000 volunteers. Governor Ellis received a telegram asking two regiments of troops and replied, "You can get no troops in North Carolina."

Governor Ellis called the General Assembly into special session, a convention bill was passed, and an election proclamation was issued. The convention assembled May 20th and voted North Carolina out of the Union and into the Confederacy. Thus North Carolina tried twice before getting into the Union and twice before getting out.

NEWS and FACTS ... of Statewide Interest

THE WORK GOES ON!

North Carolina's brewing industry has just closed its second year of "clean up or close up" activities—a self-imposed task of cooperating with state and local law enforcement officials to see to it that law-violations in retail beer establishments are not hidden behind legal retail licenses.

For us to say merely, that 171 undesirable law-violating outlets have been "closed up" through our cooperation with officials is to tell only part of the story. In many other ways—by friendly criticism, by warning or by recommending refusal of license renewals—our industry has said emphatically that it wants to protect the legitimate dealer from the consequences of the wrongdoings of the comparatively few.

This Committee pledges, as it enters its third activity year, that it will continue its unremitting efforts to help law enforcement officials maintain the general high level of beer retailing.

YOU, the PUBLIC, can also continue your part in this cooperative movement by restricting your patronage to the law-abiding outlets.
