

County Schools Are Ready For Opening

Preparations are virtually complete for reopening the thirty-four schools in the county next week, the office of the superintendent stating today that the remaining faculty positions now vacant would, in all probability, be filled over the week-end and that the plants are in good condition for the opening.

Vacation days for approximately 7,000 white and colored children in this county are fast drawing to a close, and parents are now turning to the stores and shops for the school outfits and supplies. The tobacco harvesting season invariably brings a rush, but there'll be a lot of twisting and turning next Thursday morning to get 7,000 little tots and young folks off to school, and for some the school rush will be even greater than the tobacco marketing period.

It is a rare privilege for the little folks of this county and others throughout this land of ours to return to school under a patient democracy and in peace. There are few other lands in the earth where little folks can go to get an education and incidentally to learn about our way of life.

On this page and elsewhere in this paper, important messages are directed to parents invited their patronage when it comes to starting Master Tommy and little Miss Daisy off to school in the right way.

T. Leo Haden, Interstate Commerce Examiner, has recommended a 10 per cent reduction in joint rail-ocean rates on grain and grain products shipped from the southwest to Atlantic ports.
