Challenging Conservation

The American people down to the little babe in the crib are being asked to conserve this and conserve that, and rightly so. And there is no great complaint heard about meeting the challenge, and the civilian will, with some few exceptions, of course, continue to conserve, but those who would have us conserve should take steps to eliminate waste outside the civilian realm. It has been shown that the civilian population will willingly go hungry that the service men might be fed, but reports coming from some of the camps state that precious food is being wasted in large amounts, that many could live on what is thrown away in a single camp.

Then there are those who are prodding us to action in defense of nation and ourselves while they countenance events that require the use of precious tires and scarce gasoline.

The real American is not tiring of the conservation program; he recognizes its value and timeliness, but he is tiring of waste and the reckless disregard of the program by those who ask him to shiver in his home and lick the plate in the kitchen. We can't afford to abandon the program, and since we cannot it will be advisable for our leaders and others connected with the leaders to conform to the program and try to justify it by their own acts.

All For Some And Little For Many

While its head, Admiral Land, was jawing in New York and suggesting that all organizers ought to be shot, the Maritime Commission was charged by high Washington officials, including Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, with pulling many costly blunders Mr. Land has stated time and again that he hates labor organizations, and he has acted against them often, but while he would deny the common worker a fair reward for his labors, the commission shares the spoils with the royalists to the tune of millions of dollars.

It is because of such charges that common workers have formed their organizations. That the unions have made mistakes is not to be doubted, but when they asked for five cents, millions of dollars were passed around at the top. As long as a few got all and the many got little, we talked about Democracy in the high places. There was no such thing for the common man, and when the common man asserted his right and claimed only that which was just and fair, he was branded as a communist.

Back yonder when maritime workers complained about the common treatment accorded them, high knockers branded them as trouble-makers and communists. They were classed as traitors when they refused to sail until proper insurance was provided for their loved ones on land. They did sail and thousands of them never came back. Their claims, while branded as those of a traitor, were not so outrageous after all.

But getting back to the Maritime Commission, Senator Geo. D. Aiken, of Vermont, said a few days ago that the taxpayers have been "virtually robbed of untold millions" by the commission's "extravagant and incompetent handling of the Merchant Marine."

Aiken directed ten charges, involving "exorbitant and outrageous prices," "unwarranted subsidies," "wilful extravagance, incompetent management, and looting" against the Maritime Commission and Land. They were based on the Comptroller General's reports that the Commission had:

Sold seven partially built ships to the Navy at almost $2,000,000 above their contract price to "bail out" a Florida company which was in financial trouble.

Sold another company five old ships in 1940 for $596,000 and then the next year paid that company, $3,374,700, or six times as much, for five older vessels instead of saving $2,000,000 by repurchasing the original ships under an option held by the Commission.

Aiken charged that "approximately $4,000,000 of the taxpayers' money had been dissipated" in these two deals alone. He charged that additional millions had been wasted by unwarranted construction subsidies to private companies, including $15,000,000 to the Aluminum Co. of America, and failure to collect interest and excess profits from shipbuilding companies.

But while Land was suggesting in New York that organizers should be shot, a promotion for Land was being considered in Washington.

And, yet, we wonder why we have unions.

Business As Usual

At a time when the nations' transportation system is taxed to its capacity, Florida delegations go to Washington and camp on Jos. B. Eastman's doorstep with appeals for trains to haul the vacationists to the resorts.

It is one of the big puzzles of the day to understand why people, intelligent people who know the conditions as they exist and the meaningful task at hand, go to Washington and beg and beg for something that is more likely to delay the war task than help it. One can't help but believe that there are still those who seek to promote business as usual ahead of the war task.

The transportation head will do well to deny the request of the Florida boosters, and he could well call up the man-power commission and let that body start an investigation and learn why and who would dare go to Florida for the winter when there is so much to be done at home.

Reports state that trains hardly get out of sight of one another on the main lines these days, and, yet, there are those who would sidetrack necessary travel and permit the vacationists to hog the track.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly silences the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)
