When The War Will End

President Roosevelt discredited all guessing in his speech last Wednesday evening and told when the war will end. It will end, according to the President, when every individual cooperates with his government.

Let the individual who "steals" gas for excessive pleasure driving stop and realize that he is helping prolong the war. Let the hoarder stop and think how he is working for Hitler and Company. Let every individual face the returning soldier and say, "I worked at home. I observed the ration regulations. I played the game fair and square. I did my best in the common fight against inflation."

The "Glories" of Free Enterprise

Americans have a right to demand a bill of specifications from editorial writers and columnists who incessantly harp on the glories of "free enterprise" and the necessity of preserving it. The Truman committee has revealed a story of corporate rottenness and betrayal of the people that has alarmed every American devoted to his country and its flag. The committee has shown that big corporations, garnering profits beyond the dreams of avarice, have been ready to resort to any sly practice that promised to add to their ill-gotten gains. The Anaconda Copper Company, the United States Steel Corporation, the Curtiss-Wright Aeronautical Corporation, the Western Cart-ridge Corporation and others—all exponents of "free enterprise"—have been willing to endanger the lives of our soldiers by selling defective material to our armed forces.

The conduct of these concerns can only be sickening as were their offenses, they were not condemned by our great newspapers. On the contrary, efforts have been made to explain them away.

Every attempt to curb profiteering, to insist that Uncle Sam shall get what he pays for, has been denounced by sycophantic editorial writers and columnists as an interference with "free enterprise." Public officials who have objected have been accused of harboring alien ideas and with conspiring to subvert our form of government.

If "free enterprise" means an unobstructed right to cheat and steal, as the evidence seems to indicate, why don't those who defend it come out and frankly say so?

Be An American—First

News and Observer. Seventeen speed cases were heard by a panel of the Wake County Rationing Board this week. That number of cases in a single county in one week is inexcusable.

The panel found none of the 17 had a legitimate excuse and removed, for varying periods, the gasoline supplies of all of them who had rationing cards. This action will meet general approval. It should be supplemented by the force of public opinion.

Rationing regulations are prompted by stern necessity. The small minority who will not obey such regulations should be dealt with in a manner which will not only punish them adequately but will furnish an example for others.

Franco Next

News and Observer. Franco turns down the suggestion that the monarchy of Spain be reinstated. As he was put in office by Mussolini and Hitler, he should be made to follow the example Mussolini has set for such usurpers. The sooner the better. The puppet should follow his sponsor. And they should make room for Hitler and Tojo.

The most disgraceful thing witnessed in Europe for generations was when the so-called democracies held the clothes while Mussolini and Hitler stoned the Spanish republican government to death. But it will rise again and Franco will soon join Mussolini.

INVASION ROUTE TO BERLIN

BECAUSE IT IS THE SOLE AREA through which British and American invasion forces can strike at the heart of Germany without first going through one of the occupied countries, Germany's North Sea coast, circled, is reported to have been heavily reinforced.

Growing Chicks Is All-Year Business

North Carolina hatcherymen don't get any more vacations because the hatching of baby chicks has become a year-round business under war conditions, says T. T. Brown, Extension Poultry Specialist at State College.

Both the hatcheryman and the supply flock owner must keep on the job at all times if disease free chicks of good breeding are to be produced. Preparation or delivering good chicks next season are being made and the hatcheryman and the flock owner are in close cooperation.

According to the poultry specialist, much pullorum has shown up in chicks this year and it is necessary that hens be blood tested to remove the pullorum carriers from the laying flocks as early as possible. A special school for blood testers is being held at State College and the hatcherymen are cooperating wholeheartedly in making this new program a success.

Brown also says that the hatcherymen are working closely with the flock owners on the feeding program for growing pullets. At the present time just as many pullets as possible should be put out on range with adequate summer shelters and supplied with plenty of shade and fresh water.

The birds should also be periodically checked for lice and mites so that they may be kept healthy and growing steadily at all times. Crowding should be avoided for pullets need plenty of room for growth and good development.
