What Will Be Their Explanation?

Reactionary members of Congress along with quite a few others have pointed out in bitter terms that organized labor will have a hard time explaining away the strikes.

While the reactionaries are talking about organized labor and its task of explaining many of its acts, what about the Congress? Only last year, under the Ruml plan, billions of dollars were forgiven, the relief in the main going to the big and mighty.

And now Congress comes along and refuses to levy taxes that should be levied. It is a strike, and a big one, too. It is placing the high dollar profit ahead of country and war and those fighting that war.

We could give every dollar profit, lose our investment and still be ahead of the serviceman in this game of war.

A Solid Platform

Formally opening his campaign for Governor, Dr. Ralph McDonald in Winston-Salem a few days ago offered a solid and constructive platform, one that has a clear ring and one that the people of North Carolina can well support.

There's no pussyfooting about the man's stand, and no wild promises are advanced as bait for votes. He offers a sane and progressive program.

The people of North Carolina know where Ralph McDonald stands. They recall the frank and timely challenge he flung at the staid opposition eight years ago. The State was rewarded for his efforts then, and now the people have in his candidacy a splendid opportunity to gather still greater benefits.

Dr. McDonald's record is an open book, and he stands where he has always stood, pleading and working for a progressive march. He recognizes as the immediate need an all-out support of the war and peace efforts followed by an emphatic leadership in a sound program of progress in all fields.

Educational progress, a major postwar road building program, increased farm income, adequate pay for State employees, full provision for returning service men and women, opposition to the proposed amendment to the personal income tax, payment of the State General Fund Debt, development of aviation, and a strong

Other points in McDonald's program were: Full postwar employment; industrial development; fair treatment of capital, labor and the public; improvement and expansion of State institutions; improved health and hospital facilities; promotion of social welfare; protection and development of natural resources; opposition to any State tax on land; freezing of a $20,000,000 reserve; a balanced budget; honest accounting of all State funds; better representation on State Boards for farmers and women; honest and capable appointive officials.

Will They Stop There?

Two young war veterans, back from the Mediterranean, visited John L. Lewis a short time ago and hit the labor leader in the snoot, according to some reports. Possibly their action was not in keeping with respect due the law, but few if any have expressed their regrets.

The important question now is, Will the two vets stop there? There are a lot of snoots that need to be hit if this country is going to unify its effort in support of the war program. For instance, the young men could go to the high places and strike the profiteers right in the snoot. They could work for a long time striking the snoots of those big contractors who frowned on straight contracts and demanded cost price plus or nothing.

Yes, hit old John L. in the snoot, if you would want to violate the law, but let us remember that there are many, many other snoots that need attention, that we are only developing class hatred when we attack one for its faults and overlook the errors of all the others.
