A Little Nest Egg

Martin County farmers received approximately four million dollars for tobacco during the month of October. Incomplete reports state that a little over $40,000 was invested in government "E" bonds.

Well the savings fire that can keep us from freezing in the cold days ahead has not gone out, but the flame apparently is burning mighty low.

It is indeed timely to bow to those who invested that amount and to express appreciation to those who took time to explain the need for saving now—today—and selling the bonds. There exists a feeling that someone will be mighty glad he invested some of his savings in bonds, that that someone will thank the fellow who suggested the investment.

Income What Ain't

To collect $13,139,266.79 in alcoholic beverage taxes, the State of Massachusetts had to spend right at sixty-one million dollars, according to a two-year survey conducted by a special commission composed of a court judge, the state's commissioner of health and the chairman of the parole board for the state.

The commission found that the state spent four million dollars caring for mental patients whose illnesses were traced to alcoholism. Crime, traced to the beverage, cost the state six million dollars. Annual cost of financial dependence on others due to inebriety was conservatively estimated at fifty-one million dollars. The commission included no figures representing intangible costs which do not lend themselves to a definite dollar and cents interpretation, but it intimated that broken homes were many, that numerous lives were wrecked. And Massachusetts and all its towns and cities received a total of some thirteen million dollars in taxes.

In offering to lift itself by its own bootstraps, Massachusetts apparently got something what ain't.

Is It Or Ain't It

President Harry Truman declares there is no danger of war with Russia. Senator Tom Connally declares there is no danger of war with Russia. Other leading figures declare there is no danger of war with Russia.

On the other hand, Winston Churchill declares war with Russia is inevitable.

Maybe both contentions are right. Today, this very hour, the people of the world can decide whether there will be war or no war with Russia, or anyone else, for that matter. If we will do unto Russia as we would have Russia do unto us, there need be no war. But if we join Churchill in a fight against the disintegration of the British Empire and its vast colonial system, and reserve all men's rights for ourselves, then we can expect war, sooner or later.

During the meantime, it would be wonderful if Churchill and the leaders in this country would get together and reconcile their statements, to tell the people there is or there ain't going to be any war with anybody.

The National Geographic Society, which has just completed the first post-war mapping of the United States, announces that the atomic project put two new names on America's map: Oak Ridge grew from 75 to 75,000; Richland, Washington, from 700 to 15,000. Our big job now is to see to it that atomic bombs don't reverse the process.

If every nation came to the peace table in behalf of mankind instead of "our kind," the problems might be simpler to solve.—Christian Science Monitor.
