The Generalissimo said "that is true" when Mr Stassen declared that "the press, foreign trade, and cultural exchange are spheres where the two systems must find ways of fitting together and improving their relations."

To aggravate the situation, William C. Bullitt, the wealthy diplomat, goes into print with the declaration that if Russia had the atomic bomb she would have already dropped it on the United States. Now, we don't know how Bullitt can support such statements. Is he a prophet, one who can claim the mantle of Elijah, or is he just plain talking through his hat?

The wild assertion is picked up by what seems to be a half baked committee on Un-American Activities, and our own Herbert Bonner says in the Congressional Record, "our testimony frightens me." He adds that Mr. Bullitt has opened his eyes, and so forth and so on. It would seem that the world has gone crazy when a supposedly leader of men comes out with such a wild assertion, and chosen men eat it up as hog sloppers over slops.

Little wonder that Russia chooses to censor the reports prepared by flighty correspondents who, in too many cases, write with one hand and hold a liquor bottle in the other. Possibly Russia does not want its trials and tribulations, its conditions aired before the world, but there is that sneaking belief that there are other causes for the censorship, and it is reasonable to believe, judging from what's happening right here at home, that the cause is traceable right to our own acts.

Cause For All Things

When a man dances he pays the fiddler. When we throw away we wind-up in want. We reap just about what we sow. Every act has its motivation.

We cannot understand Russia's censorship. But do we try to understand it? Do we want to understand it? Russia has lifted its censorship on several occasions, but it was slapped back. One reason why Russia has a censorship was explained by Joe Stalin to Harold E. Stassen at a recent conference with the Minnesota man. Stalin, according to Mr. Stassen said,

"It will be difficult in our country to dispense with censorship. Mr. Molotov tried to do it several times. We had to resume it, and each time we repented it. In the autumn of 1945, censorship was repealed. I was on leave, and they started to write stories that Mr. Molotov had forced me to go on leave and then wrote stories that I should return and fire him. These stories depicted the Soviet Government as a sort of zoological garden. Of course, our people got angry, and they had to resume censorship."

"In the beginning, the correspondents write sensational stories. The newspapers publish them and make money on them and then fire the writers."

What Now

It is hoped that some of those fellows who insisted that the OPA being kicked out of the window are satisfied, for their satisfaction is about the only good that has come out of the agency's death so far.

The lifting of the OPA controls has given rise to inflation just as the economists and some of the lawmakers warned. Remember, how those who stood by the OPA were associated with foreign isms? Of course, the OPA was not perfect, and there were mistakes. But the drawbacks offered by OPA were small compared with the inflation monster now devouring the man of little income.

The inflationary period following in due time is now inviting strikes. Yet, there are those who still think the common worker is responsible when the main trouble stems from action taken by apparently weak-minded lawmakers at the direction of a greedy NAM and others of its ilk.
