Now Is The Time!

By Ruth Taylor
The editorial pages of every newspaper, the commentators whose voices ring out over the radio dial, all proclaim the same thing—Management and Labor must get together.

Prejudice or bias for one side or another often colors this clamor, but it still rises from both sides—and, far more important to both, from the great middle ground of the public, who are tired of the strife and who are keenly conscious of their own danger if an agreement is not reached.

In this outcry for better understanding lies the golden opportunity for those who are honestly and sincerely trying to bring about better industrial relations. With the attention of all the people focused on this subject, there is opportunity for the forceful and accurate presentation of all the facts. No attempt of selfish interests to accomplish their own ends can succeed under steady public scrutiny.

To arrive at a solution, both Management and Labor must consider the problems concerned, not only from their own viewpoint but from the viewpoint of each other. The facts must all be put on the table and the arguments for each side given not in heat and anger, but with full knowledge and consideration of the common problems we are all facing.

Once they have arrived at the facts, then is the opportunity for a permanent solution. Both sides will have to be ready to give up something for the common good, for only when there is a real feeling of partnership can there be a relationship that will endure. Surely both sides have brains enough to work out such a system.

CAUTION—Do not let the "back of those with" in the ranks of both Management and Labor—who sincerely desire a system by which all disputes could be amicably and fairly settled, the day of peace in industrial relations would be close at hand.

The problem is on for the whole country. And it is up to the people themselves not to be swayed by prejudice for or against either side in the dispute, not to penalize either side—but to decide in the interests of all the people of the United States—employers, employees and public alike.

Chameleon Committee

Christian Science Monitor
"The more it changes, the more it remains the same," a French saying about politics runs. "Plus ca change, plus c'est la meme chose!" The way the U. N. committee handling the Palestine problem changed itself into a General Assembly and then back again into a Political Committee the other day must have reminded many onlookers of the French saw. Anyway, the procedural acrobatics were not only amusing and amazing, but lubricative.

The General Assembly had already directed the committee to hear the Jewish Agency. The Arab states then demanded equal treatment for the Arab spokesmen. It was then pointed out to Arab members that the committee wished to hear the Arab case, and so would not need an order from the Assembly. But this did not satisfy the Arab delegates. They wanted "legal" equality in addition to factual equality.

They refused to take part in the discussion until the committee found a way to provide this equality. The committee did this by voting itself into an Assembly—the General Assembly of the United Nations, no less. It could do so, because in composition the committee and the Assembly are identical. Then, as the Assembly, it directed the committee to hear the Arab voice.

IN MEMORIAM

Memory of Pte. James L. Hays who died May 25, 1944, in Italy.

Three long years ago today,
Our "Darling son and brother" was taken away.
God took you out of this world of sin.

Which I hope to meet you in the end.

I look at your picture and I say,
My "Darling Brother" was taken away.
Maybe God will help me go through,
Although I am here without you.

Tonight and every night I'm thinking of you, dear,
And always wishing that you were here,
To sing and play together like we used to do
But now we have all this to do without you.

The cap you gave to Mom for keeps,
In the room where it stays, I sleep,
I look at that cap and wonder why
You went across and had to die.

It was to make this country free
And that you fought for Liberty,
I will always be proud of you
"Dear Brother,"
And never forget the days we spent together.

I will always think of you again,
And the thoughts of you will always remain
How good and kind you were to me,
And that you had to die overseas.
By his sister,
Amanda Faye Rogerson.
