Col. Rosser said there were more fatal accidents involving pedestrians during August than any Twenty persons lost their lives by not crossing at intersections, coming from behind parked cars, or working or playing in roadways. Nineteen persons were killed in collisions between two or more motor vehicles; fifteen by motor vehicle overturning or running off roadway; four by motor vehicle colliding with bicycle; and five in other non-collision accidents.

Pedestrian accidents showed an 11 percent increase over August, 1946, and motor vehicle-bicycle collisions showed a 33 percent increase.

Cities and towns reported 423 accidents in which 13 persons were killed and 118 were injured. This was an eight percent decrease in fatalities, and a 13 percent increase in accidents over August, 1946.

r'ayetteville led cities in fatalities with four persons killed, and Charlotte was second with two. Through August, Charlotte has led in fatalities with 18 persons killed, seven of whom were pedestrians.
