Hard To Understand

While we are buying our way into the minds of people across the sea, we overlook the fact that we have a bill of goods the characteristics of which are difficult to grasp and understand.

If the Balkan people do not take to our ways and customs overnight, we must remember that we accept some of our own antics without serious thought or reasoning.

We think nothing of it, but it must be puzzling to the hungry fellow in Bulgaria or some other Balkan country when America continues to buy gold to add to its bulging stock. They dig it up in South Africa; we pay about $35 an ounce for it, and then bring it to this country and bury it. The Balkan native wonders why the gold isn't left in the ground in the first place? And when Bevins comes along and suggests that the gold be used to help save the world situation we laugh at him and our Balkan friend becomes more puzzled.

A large reduction in peanut acreage is demandatory for this section next year. We're going to decrease the plantings of the food crop when millions are starving. There is little wonder that the Balkan peoples when they are appraised of such antics are inclined to shop around for other systems. It is hard for him to understand how in a land of plenty we rise, boom and bust.

America's Iron Curtain

We have heard about Russia's iron curtain, and now a young fellow named Paul Tullier, writing in Collier's, tells a few things about an American "iron curtain" in Korea. Tullier says, among other things:

1. The United States has created an iron curtain of its own in Korea.
 2. The facts about the situation are being kept from the American people.
 3. Russian arrests of American soldiers are almost daily occurrences. In turn, Americans beat up Russians almost every day.
 4. Koreans hate the United States.
 5. Green troops, 18 and 19 year olds, have not been indoctrinated how to deal with Koreans. They are treating Korea as a conquered country instead of a liberated one.
 6. Civilian employees of the military government are "incredibly incapable."
 7. Black markets flourish on street corners.
- Russian sins are described by Tullier as being even worse than ours. It is quite evident that by multiplying our own sins we'll not be able to correct those of others. Maybe, we could get somewhere by practicing the same kind of democracy we preach.

Narrowed Down To Name Calling

Even though we are pumping billions of dollars to nearly every rat hole on the face of the globe in the name of peace, our work for peace has been reduced down to the lowly business of name calling.

Congressman Dorn of South Carolina, addressing the North Carolina Young Democrats in Raleigh recently, said the warmonger charge hurled at him by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, in an address before the second meeting of the United Nations Assembly, was false.

All the talk about bringing peace to the world was a bit premature, and although he denies the war mongering charge, it is difficult for Representative Dorn to explain away the following words spoken by him last May 7, "The Soviet Union cannot be halted by $400,000,000 (part of the gift made to Greece), but by a big air force and bombing potential industrial centers of the Soviet Union, Ural Mountains industrial area, and other vital places."

It would seem that the representative is on shaky ground, that instead of working for peace we are talking for division of East and West and ultimately for war.

Colored Youths Attend State Fair On Friday

Traveling in two busses and private cars, 101 colored 4-H club members, representing Bethlehem, Biggs, Cross Roads, Dardens, Everetts, Gold Point, Hassell, Hamilton, Jamesville, Oak City, Parmeic, Robersonville and Woolard clubs, attended the State fair in Raleigh last Friday, many of them seeing the capital city for the first time.

Accompanied by their leaders, the children were greatly impressed by the farm exhibits, and the mud and rain did not interrupt their trip, one report declaring that most of the club members did not even run for cover during showers.
